The old saying that if March comes in like a lamb it will go out like a lion, may be true—we don't know. But we certainly have had lamb-like weather this week.

Many farmers get "itchy" to get in the field at this time of year, and our Amish neighbor in his field along Horseshoe Road north of the Conestoga Valley High School took advantage of the open thaw on Thursday afternoon to work the horses and plow. It was windy, but the gulls took advantage of an opportunity too. They seemed to enjoy the juicy morsels of food they picked up from the newly opened furrow.

State DHIA Reports At Annual Meeting

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — "Not only can DHIA help dairymen to keep records and do a better job of management, but also, DHIA can be a cohesive force across the nation to bring the factions of the dairy industry together," said Doyle Waybright, Mason-Dixon Farm, Gettysburg.

Waybright was one of the presenters at the Wednesday afternoon general session of the third annual meeting of the new state corporation of the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association.

"We have a lot of different opinions, but DHIA could be the force to bring dairy farmers together," Waybright said. "Some people say we have a national milk market, but we do have regional aspects to the market. But we need to work together to stabilize the forces so we can always get a good return on our investment. The American dairy farmer is in a unique position to supply other nations with dairy products. We just have not had the leadership. I see DHIA having a roll in that leadership."

In the report from the general manager, Richard Barth reported a long list of accomplishments for DHIA in the last year. The association had a positive margin of $13,000, up from a $22,000 deficit last year. The state added 113 new herds to bring their total to 6,102; had 40 new ARIS users; and reduced the turnaround time for testing samples to 3.5 days.

Twenty counties merged into the state association and the heifer

Aggressive Care, Marketing, Urged For Poultry Industry

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — "Nutritionally and biologically, the egg is the safest food money can buy. You have a wonderful product, but you have been letting it fall down," Mario Yepez told poultry producers at the Poultry Progress Day on Thursday.

[illegible]ook at the supplier like the customer looks at us," said Yepez who is the quality assurance field inspector for Pathmark.

He urged producers to launch a strong advertising campaign to combat the adverse and unfair publicity the egg has received.

To build consumer confidence, speakers at the annual all day event stressed the importance of clean poultry houses and healthy birds.

Rusty Barnes, sales representative for Biomune, Inc., in Salisbury, Md., stressed the importance of proper ventilation in poultry houses. "It's worth taking the time to figure what's going on inside those poultry houses," Barnes said.

He explained the necessity of static pressure and relative humidity that is needed to keep dust and ammonia levels under control.

He warned that fans should sycronize to pull static pressure throughout the building rather than just move air in the building.

Fans should be kept at the optimum speed and that means knocking the dust off the shutters weekly, he said. If fan belts aren't tightened, the ability to move air can be cut in half.

"Never unplug the fans," Barnes warned. No matter how much you are convinced you will remember, eventually something will happen. He told the story of a farmer who was called to the hospital when his son was involved in a serious accident. The next day, the farmer had two houses of dead birds because the fans were not turned on and the doors were closed.

Dr. John Schwartz, multi-county poultry agent, told participants at the seminar how to control flies in cage layer operations.

"How clean is clean enough when you clean and disinfect poultry houses?" asked Dr. Ed Mallinson, extension poultry veterinarian from the University of Maryland.

He alerted producers that often the houses aren't clean enough. He related studies that show it is almost impossible to rid wood of salmonella.

CMAs Save Farmers Money, Increase Farm Profits

FREEMANSBURG (Northampton Co.) — For the annual fee of about $5 an acre, farmers can obtain better profits from their crops — and give the work of soil testing, scouting, and managing the fertilizer and pesticide use to Penn State specialists.

How can farmers sign up? Simply by becoming a member of one of the 10 crop management associations (CMAs) throughout Pennsylvania.

As of now, no crop management associations (local, nonprofit organizations run by member farmers), exist in southeastern Pennsylvania. But if enough farmers become interested and can meet collectively, one could be started.

"By helping members use such crop-production inputs as fertilizer and pesticides efficiently, CMAs work to increase farm profits," said Jan Pruss, manager of the crop management program at Penn State. The association has been helping farmers manage their field crops since 1979.

Variety of services

Right now, according to Pruss, there are 500 farms with 85,000 acres under the watchful eyes of professional crop managment technicians and consultants, cov-

National Milk, Others Seek New Government Dairy Policy

WASHINGTON, D.C. — With farm milk prices at their lowest level since the late 1970s, there is once more talk in the nation's capital of the need for a different approach to dairy policy.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has received 48 proposals as part of review process designed to lead later this year to congressional consideration of an inventory management program, according to a spokesman for the USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. The ASCS will spearhead the department's review efforts.

John Mengel, a USDA economist, said the department plans to issue a preliminary recommendation by June 1 and then allow one month for comments. Any final recommendations are due before Congress by Aug. 1, Mengel said.

The entire process was mandated by the 1990 farm bill, in which Congress could not decide what form, if any, supply management should take. Rather, the farm

Pseudorabies — How Does It Spread?

First of a series

Editor's note: The spread and control of pseudorabies, a disease affecting many swine herds in the northern part of Lancaster County, will be featured in a series of Pseudorabies Update articles in this and future issues of Lancaster Farming. In addition, an educational meeting about pseudorabies will be held on Monday at the Bergstrasse Elementary School (Rt. 322 exit of Rt. 222, across from the church) at 7:30 p.m. Those who need transportation from the New Holland/Terre Hill area may contact Floyd Huber, of the Lancaster Chester Pork Producers, at (717) 656-4318.

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Nearly everyone who works with livestock, especially swine, has heard of pseudorabies, and maybe knows somebody in Lancaster County who has had problems with the disease.

It may come as no surprise when you hear of some hog operations that are having problems with pseudorabies. But what about that place where you know the owner and they do a good job, or someone that has cleaned up from a previous problem and they become reinfected despite what appears to be good practices?

Another question is: Why, after two years of efforts to eradicate pseudorabies from Lancaster, does the disease still persist?

If there were one easy answer to these questions, the problem would have been solved, but a good part of the answer is in the biology of the pseudorabies virus and the way that it spreads.

Pseudorabies is unlike other members of its

Demanding Farmers Will Be Planting Proven Funk's G Brand Hybrids, Too

As a demanding farmer, you know a winning hybrid when you see it. That's why you demanded new Funk G Brand hybrids like 4472, 4530 and 4624. In fact, your demand was so high, we've sold out of these new hybrids.

But don't forget some of our proven performers like 4393, 4543 and 4626. They've been pleasing demanding farmers for years now. Why?

Because they, too, are backed by demanding CIBA-GEIGY research. That's why they're good enough to carry the CIBA-GEIGY reputation for quality.

And like our newer hybrids, they deliver a performance package of more than just big yields. You'll get standability, disease resistance, plant health, dry-down and much more.

That's why demanding farmers will be planting these proven Funk G Brand hybrids. Shouldn't you be one of them?

Call us today. Our proven performance will meet your demands.

OKLAHOMA NATIONAL STOCKYARDS WEEKLY CATTLE SUMMARY COMPARED WITH LAST WEEK'S CLOSE: FEEDER STEERS OVER 600 LB. STEADY TO $1.00 LOWER. HEIFERS OVER 600 LB. STEADY TO $2.00 LOWER, FULL DECLINE ON OVER 700 LB. WEIGHTS. STEERS AND HEIFERS UNDER 600 LB. STEADY. DEMAND AND TRADE ACTION SOFTER THAN LAST WEEK DUE TO LACK OF PEN SPACE AT SOME FEEDLOT DESTINATIONS. THIS CONDITION EXPECTED TO CONTINUE FOR A FEW WEEKS AS CATTLE COME OFF WHEAT PASTURES. Jacques Scoreboard

Chief alfalfa

In 1988-89 Minnesota trials, Chief had the highest resistance rating against Phytophora and Bacterial wilt plus good scores on Anthracnose, Verticillium and Fusarium resistance. Big yields of top quality forage make this one an all-star.

Multi-plier alfalfa

Multifoliate with high yield potential and unmatched disease resistance ratings. In University of Wisconsin disease tests, Multi-plier scored 24 of a possible 25 points. Top quality forage, too.

OPINION

Pseudorabies Control: The Time Is Ripe

For the past decade, pseudorabies (PRV), a contagious viral disease of swine, has been causing problems for Lancaster County pork producers.

The disease has caused death losses and illness in pigs. At times, it spreads to cattle and sheep, even to dogs and cats. In all these animals, the disease is dramatic and swift, ending in death. Economic losses in swine can be severe, although some herds experience little or no observable illness.

Pseudorabies creates a wider circle of loss for Pennsylvania producers. Infected herds have restrictions on movement of their swine; testing costs and vaccination costs add to the dollar drain because of the virus. Neighboring herds and swine producers who may wish to purchase swine from the affected area are at risk.

A decade ago, producer options for control of PRV were limited. Pork producers throughout the U.S. were uncertain if eradication was possible or practical. Vaccine use was limited and not permitted at all in Pennsylvania. Quarantine and depopulation were the control measures.

That was then. This is now.

According to Dr. Larry Hutchinson, Extension veterinarian, Penn State University, in 1991, Pennsylvania has a new set of swine disease regulations. Several genetically-engineered vaccines are available that produce immunity but can be differentiated from disease-producing virus by special tests. Control measures coupled with vaccine use are eliminating the virus from many herds.

Both the National and the Pennsylvania Pork Producers councils are committed to control and eventual eradication of PRV. State funding for an accelerated PRV control has been slow in coming, but a large-scale test and vaccinate program for northern Lancaster County is gaining momentum.

All the tools and information necessary for control of PRV are available now. Lancaster County and Pennsylvania pork producers should move now to clean up this health problem. The time is ripe!

NOW IS THE TIME

To Practice Safety Around Liquid Manure Pits

Many manure pits will be cleaned out at this time of year for field application. This by-product of the livestock and dairy business is very useful as fertilizer. However, the pit can be a safety hazard because of poisonous and explosive gases. When the mixture is agitated in order to be removed, these gases are more plentiful and much more dangerous. Good ventilation above the pit is very important. Also, anyone who goes down in the empty pit should be wearing a gas mask. These gases are dangerous and can be fatal to both humans and animals. We urge all farmers to caution their employees of this potential danger.

To Be Aware Of Pesticide Law Changes

Pennsylvania Pesticide Regulations have been undergoing some major revisions during the past several years, according to Robert Anderson, Extension Agronomy Agent. These revisions have been talked about during that time and have been properly adopted. The two revisions which will have the most impact on agriculture need to be pointed out. The first change is that if a person's certification should lapse due to not completing the update training requirements, the person has one year to complete the training requirements without being required to take the certification test over. During that period, the person's certification is not valid and they may not purchase or use restricted use pesticides. After the one year period, the person must be re-examined. The second change will require records be kept of the use of any restricted use pesticides. These records must be maintained for a three year period. The records must include the location of where the pesticide was used with sufficient description to allow identification of the field, the brand name of the product used, the formulation used, the dosage rate, the total amount of the pesticide used, the name of the person making the application and their certification number.

To Control Wild Garlic

We may like onions on our hamburgers and in other foods, but very few of us like onion-flavored milk. This can easily happen on dairy farms where wild garlic plants are allowed to grow. Many pastures are infested with wild garlic. One of the best times to start control measures on this weed is early in the spring when the young plants are 4 to 8 inches high. An application of 2,4-D will knock them down. Follow the label for directions. When this is applied around the middle to latter part of March, little damage is done to any legume in the area. If garlic plants are allowed to mature each year, the pasture area will become so contaminated that dairy cows cannot ...e the grass.

To Control Mice In Orchards

Now that the winter weather is almost gone, our fruit growers should take a look at the newly exposed grass sod in their orchards. If there are runways at the surface of the grass, it is a good sign that there are plenty of mice in the orchard, even though a mouse baiting program may have been followed last fall.

The mice have used up their stockpiles of stored food and are now looking for a fresh supply. At this time of the year they will move quickly onto bark and roots of fruit trees.

Fruit growers should rebait their orchards as soon as possible if there are fresh mouse signs.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

SHOULD WE WAKE GOD?
March 10, 1991

Background Scripture:
Luke 11:5-13.
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 7:7-12.

I have been praying for the same person for the past 30 years. It would appear that my prayers so far have been unsuccessful. So, when I find the Psalmist crying, "How long, O Lord? Wilt thou forget me forever? How long wilt thou hide thy face from me?" (13:1), I feel he is singing my song: "How long must I bear pain in my soul, and have sorrow in my heart all the day?"

That's why Jesus' Parable of the Importunate Friend in Luke 11:5-13 gives me some difficulties. This is the story of a man who receives a late evening visitor and finds he doesn't have enough bread to properly be a good host. So, although it is already midnight, he goes to the house of a friend and knocks on his door. The friend doesn't want to get up, but finally he does because of the other man's persistent knocking. The meaning of Jesus' parable, thus, is that we need to be persistent — importunate — in our prayers. So, he promises, "Ask, and it will be given you; seek, and you will find; knock, and it will be opened to you. For every one who asks receives, and he who seeks finds, and to him who knocks it will be opened" (11:9,10).

FISH OR SERPENT?

To make sure he gets this message across, Jesus goes on to ask, "What father among you, if his son asks for a fish, will instead of a fish give him a serpent?" Even imperfect earthly fathers try to respond to their children's needs. How much more can we expect from our Father who is perfect? The point, therefore, is that we must be persistent if we expect to be successful in our praying.

So, what's my problem? How much more persistent am I to be? I've spent literally half my life praying for someone desperately in need of help and instead of a fish I seem to have been given a serpent. It is not because my prayer is a selfish one. Although no prayer is completely unselfish — it would give me great joy to have my prayer fulfilled — still it is for another's welfare. I am not asking to sing like Pavarotti, look like Redford, or throw passes like Montana.

AN UNWILLING GOD

In the parable, the man wakened from his sleep doesn't really want to help his importunate friend, but does so anyway because he wants to stop the ruckus and get back to sleep as soon as possible. Is Jesus saying that God is like that man? That we must get his attention with our persistence? That he will respond to us only to get us off his back? Is my apparent failure in prayer the result of a lack of persistence, the wrong technique, or sales-resistance on God's part?

No, despite my disappointment and frustration, I do not think that is what the parable means. William Barclay says that the point of the parable "is not that we must batter at God's door until we finally compel him for very weariness to give us what we want, until we coerce an unwilling God to answer" (The Gospel of Luke, by William Barclay, Westminster Press, 1977). The point of this parable is that God is not uncaring, unwilling or unable. God does care and that is why we are to be persistent — not because God needs us to persist, but because we do. We need to hang in there until in God's own time the need can be fulfilled in a way that is in harmony with God's will.

Higher Pork Gains...

From Lower Trypsin Inhibitor

All soy protein products contain trypsin inhibitor which prevents swine from fully digesting essential amino acids

Insta-Pro dry extrusion consistently removes a higher percentage of trypsin inhibitor than other processing methods resulting in maximum protein utilization

Insta Pro extruded soybeans combined with ProKcal and Energy Balancer Base Mixes produce up to 8% more pork on 14% less feed.

Family Farm Has Place In Village Of Nations

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The family farm may become slightly larger, but it does have a place in the futuristic new order of nations, according to John Block, former U.S. Agriculture Secretary.

Block was the key speaker at Hamilton Bank's 10th annual agri-educational seminar held Monday at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center. The theme of the seminar was, "Agriculture: Adjusting To Global Complexities."

According to Block, who is president of the National-American Wholesale Grocers' Association, spoke to about 400 agriculturalists and agribusinessmen about his views on world events and world direction and the impact on agriculture in the United States.

According to Block, there is no room for isolationism and the principals of capitalism — of becoming more and more efficient and competitive in a free-trade atmosphere — are going to be the rules.

"I look at agriculture with an optimistic view. I think American agriculture can compete with anyone in the world. We're looking at a more competitive agriculture," he said.

And in that arena of higher competition, Block said the role of the family farm still has a place.

"The family farm has a place in free enterprise. Ninety-five percent are family farms now," Block said.

From talking to many people all over the nation, Block said that many people have somehow gotten the notion that agriculture has been taken over by coporate America.

"There are a lot of myths about agriculture. The public at large has a great appreciation for farmers and the industry. One reason we made that image is we do work hard and supply a good product."

But overall, in the sense that a free market means working in a highly competitive state, family farms will probably have to get a little bigger and be better capitalized, Block said.

Block said, "There is distinct interdependence (between nations) and no way to get away from it." He said U.S. agricultural exports have surge to the second highest level in history.

Block supported his opinion on world direction with an ancedotal recollection of an hour-long meeting with President Bush that he had late last fall.

"He (Bush) talked about the Middle East . . . He wanted us to get the word out . . . it's not just about oil. It's about a new order of nations."

Also a radio commentator, Block said he sees the result of Bush's determination in the diplomacy used to bring the coalition together and the no-backing down positions he took in support of United Nations resolutions.

"We're going to have some positive results (from the war). The U.N. finally worked together for that purpose for which it was established.

"We're going to see a realignment in the Middle East. Our relationship with Egypt and Saudi Arabia is going to be stronger than ever before."

Block also said he sees an over all decrease in conflict in that part of the world.

"Next time someone has an idea of stealing the wealth from a neighbor, they're going to ask George Bush before they do it."

A lowering of the dollar's value on the world market, along with less government agricultural trading subsidies within most nations will lead to a fairer and more opportunisitc world market, he said.

However, getting representatives back at the table for con-

bill left intact the existing policy of using adjustments in the support price to try to balance milk supplies with demand.

The bill proposed inventory management as a tool to curb milk production should excesses raise the cost of the government's support program to unacceptable levels. However, if no plan is implemented, USDA is still left with the option of assessing dairy farmers for program costs when the size of a yearly surplus is projected to exceed 7 billion pounds (on a total solids basis). These assessments would be in addition to those currently being levied to meet budget reduction targets.

Projections for the current year predict a surplus of 6.4 billion pounds, but dairy leaders fear these further assessments could be triggered in 1992.

Dan Lauwers, a lobbyist for the National Milk Producers Federation, said, "The federation and its member cooperatives are committed to seeing some legislation passed this year."

The federation, which represents most of the nation's dairy cooperatives, is one of the organizations that submitted a proposal to USDA. The proposal outlines two possible approaches to supply management: mandatory assessments coupled with incentive payments for reduced production or two-tier pricing tied to a base-excess system.

The federation also proposes the creation of a board of dairy farmers to oversee the administration of such programs on the grounds, Lauwers said, that "if we're going to bear more and more of the burden of the stabilization program, then we want more and more of a say in how it is run."

Lauwers said the proposal is intended not only as a supply management tool, but as a means of boosting dairy farm income. Toward that end, it includes recommendations for increasing the minimum solids-not-fat standards in fluid milk, maintaining and expanding various nutrition programs that use surplus commodities and strengthening federal assistance for dairy exports. In terms of supply management, the proposal is deliberately somewhat vague, Lauwers said, so that people don't argue over the details.

According to Jim Fraher, an economist for the Pennsylvania-based Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, lack of agreement on the fine print has long dogged the industry.

"The industry has never been united on an alternative to current policy," Fraher said. "This has been one of the main reasons why such a program has not gone into place."

Fraher said a program that would stabilize the recent volatility in the milk market would help calm the concerns of farmers who've seen record high prices plunge to 10-year lows in less than a year.

However, even without a supply management program, the local economist sees some reason for optimism.

"I think the dairy industry here in the Northeast... is going to remain competitive. The market is going to come back, but it is not going to come back in 1991. I think 1991 is going to be a painful year. There's a good chance (the slump) could linger into mid-1992." But, after that, Fraher added, "we could well be looking at some modest price increases."

USDA's Mengel said the 48 proposals represent "nothing really new" in the way of policy options, although a couple expouse the concept of a Class IV price that was discussed for the first time during last year's farm bill debate. In addition to those submitted, the USDA task force must study a target price-deficiency payment option and the Class IV pricing option, he said.

Farm Program Sign-Up Under Way

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — "We began accepting applications for the 1991 farm programs on March 4th," Donald Unangst, State Executive Director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said. The U.S. Department of Agriculture recently announced sign-up and other acreage reduction program provisions for wheat, corn, sorghum, barley, rice and cotton.

The farm programs call for a 15 percent reduction in wheat acres and 7.5 percent in corn, sorghum, and barley acres.

For meeting these acreage reduction requirements, Unangst said farmers will be eligible for price support loans, deficiency payments and other benefits on their 1991 program crops.

"Wheat and feed grain program participants may request 40 percent of the estimated deficiency payments at sign-up," Unangst said. Estimated payment rates are $1.47 per bushel for wheat, $1.40 for wheat in optional winter wheat provision, $.58 for corn, $.56 for sorghum, $.47 for barley, and $.15 for oats.

Under the 1991 programs, farmers will have planting flexibility on up to 25 percent of the crop acreage base. 'That 25 percent is called 'flex' acreage." Unangst said farmers may plant on these acres, any program crop, any oilseed, industrial, or experimental crop designated by USDA, or any other crop except fruits and vegetables. Unangst said a list of prohibited crops will be available in ASCS County Offices across the state.

The ASCS official said the amount of regular deficiency payments that a person is entitled to under one or more programs for wheat and feed grains may not exceed $50,000, the same as for the 1990 crops.

Further information and enrollment in programs may be obtained through April 26, 1991 at any one of 60 local ASCS offices.

On The Record

Dick Barth

PA DHIA General Mgr.

We know the times have changed for DHIA members. Your milk checks are thinner now than six months ago and that squeezes profits on your farm.

Maybe we can help by offering the following list of suggestions developed in conjunction with Penn State Extension. Can you find a useful suggestion among these ways to save or make money? The figures are based on a 50 cow herd for one year of operation.

1. Dropping the herd average somatic cell linear score by one (from 4 to 3) will increase profits by $2,900.

2. One cow with a SCC linear score of eight produces as many cells as 32 cows with a linear score of 3.

3. One or two high SCC cows can keep the whole herd from receiving quality bonus.

Example: 50 cow herd with 17,000 pounds herd average would lose $1,692 per year (20 cent bonus).

4. Reducing calving interval from 14 to 13 months increases profits by $4,500.

5. Reducing breeding services per cow from 2.2 to 1.7 will save $250 per year in semen alone for a herd using $10 semen.

6. Reducing feed cost $1.00 per cwt. of milk will save $8,500 in a year.

7. Overfeeding grain by one pound per day will cost $1,300 ($9.00 per cwt.)

8. Saving three pounds of grain during the last 90 days of lactation will save over $1,200 ($9.00 per cwt.).

9. Increasing rolling herd average by 1,000 pounds can increase income by $6,100.

10. Increased milk production of one-half pound per day per cow pays for DHIA AM-PM testing.

MEETS THE CHALLENGE

Family Farm Has Place

tinued talks for a new General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) will be one of the goals for the Bush administration, Block said.

On the domestic side, Block said farmers have to take an interest in their own political representation, especially with the caps on federal spending and the fight among various special interest groups to secure funding.

"Agriculture's budget isn't protected. It can have its portion stolen."

Block said the caps are not a "5-year-fix," but more a downpayment on a budget that is out of control.

After enumerating the factors that indicate a recession, he said, "I think we can rise out of this economy in short order."

On the farm bill, Block said that the options built into it have made it a better farm bill than the 1985 bill. "It gives a chance to raise what the market is calling for."

He said he expected farmer participation to stay about the same, but for fewer and fewer to use the programs because of continuing decreases in benefits associated with the programs.

He said subsidies world wide have been cut; voted out in Sweden and eliminated in Australia. The U.S. can be expected to follow suit.

"The direction is to be prepared for agriculture without government support."

The war in the Gulf distracted world leaders from concentrating on securing a GATT, "But with the war over, talks will be resurected," Block said.

World markets are the key to continued support for U.S. agricultural production, according to the former ag secretary.

He said that despite the relatively small percentage of disposable income that Americans spend on food, compared to people of other nations, that seeking to artificially raise prices of food in the United States to help farmers is not a direction.

"You got to let competition work," he said.

He said that Eastern Europe should be a good market for technology, fertilizer, and other agricultural support services and goods.

"The best market for the U.S. is Japan and the Asian region. Twenty-five percent of the food we sell goes to Japan. They're going to continue to be a good market for beef."

He said the Middle East presents an immediate opportunity.

"There's a huge vacuum for food. A huge need for food that's going to go in right away."

In other areas, Block said helping to establish a strong market and economic partner is proceeding, but it won't be easy.

Poland's attempts at switching to a free-market based economy is suffering from a lack of capital for private investment. He said that the Poles are not seeking outside ownership, but are hard put to find individuals or groups with enough financial strength to take over large cooperative farms and businesses held by the government.

Similar problems beset the Soviet Union, he said. And he predicted that the goal of a free-market economy in the Soviet Union will not be achieved via their 500-day plan. Instead, he said, it will take generations.

However, Block said that, "The more exchange we have and the more (U.S.) people over there, the better chance there is," to create a stable, privately-owned and managed business sector.

"Look for Bush to continue to back Gorbecheav. My judgement is . . . he is loyal to people who stand by him."

According to Block, Bush wants "and is going to get" a free trade agreement between Mexico, Canada and the United States. The effect on U.S. agriculture, and that of the other nations, as a whole should be beneficial.

Back to domestic issues, Block said that farmers need to not only support large commodity marketing and advertising efforts paid for by producer assessments.

He said that a portion of the millions of dollars raised should be directed toward telling the public how good food is, not just to enjoy it.

Ed Madigan, Bush's choice for new secretary of agriculture to replace Clayton Yueter, "should be confirmed easily. He knows the ag industry well. Not only is he an expert on the agriculture industry, he knows enivornmental issues.

"He's probably going to concentrate on the domestic side of agriculture and depend on Carla Hill" for the international.

Viking Ship® Calcium Nitrate
15.5-0-0-19Ca
The fertilizer to start with ...the fertilizer to stay with

GROWTH

Nitrate nitrogen is the fast-acting, controllable N-source for fruit trees. Unlike ammonium nitrogen (NH_4), nitrate-N affords optimum nutrition timing for rapid growth and early production. Calcium Nitrate supplies 14.5% nitrate nitrogen.

QUALITY

Calcium availability, at adequate levels, is essential to early and sustained production of high-quality tree fruit. Young trees, as well as mature, producing orchards never outgrow their need for calcium.

Specifically, root vigor, reduced fruit disorders, optimum color and size and storage quality of fruit are directly related to adequate calcium levels. With Calcium Nitrate as your orchard fertilizer, trees and soil receive 19% water-soluble calcium.

YIELD

Heavy production of high-quality tree fruit has been achieved—for more than 40 years—by growers using Viking Ship Calcium Nitrate fertilizer.

Use Calcium Nitrate in your fertilizer program. You will be pleased by the predictable response—the growth, quality and yield improvement possible with Calcium Nitrate's combination of essential orchard nutrients. For the life of your trees...Calcium Nitrate...the fertilizer to start with, the fertilizer to stay with!

As with any fertilizer application, consult your extension office or other advisory service for recommended practice that meets local crop and soil conditions.

Pseudorabies

group, the herpesvirus. The normal herpesvirus is host specific, that is, it causes disease in only one type of animal. In people, a specific herpesvirus is associated with cold sores and rarely is associated with disease in any other animals.

In contrast, the pseudorabies virus affects many species, including swine, cats, dogs, sheep, cattle, and wild animals such as deer, coyote, and mice. Principally, pseudorabies affects swine because swine are relatively resistant to the effects of the disease.

Where swine may be inapparent carriers of the disease, other species such as cattle, dogs, and cats, when exposed to the virus, will inevitably die of the disease. In these cases, these more susceptible animals will act as sentinels, warning of presence of the disease.

The role that other species play in the spread of the disease is not known. Most experts do not rule out a role for spread of the disease by animals other than swine, but it is usually thought that they do not have a major role in spreading infection between swine herds.

By far, the most important way that pseudorabies is spread from farm to farm is through introduction of infected, though apparently healthy pigs into an uninfected herd. This occurs by sharing boars between farms of purchasing new pigs to replace animals that have been sold.

Maintaining an open herd can lead to outbreaks of pseudorabies for many reasons. The movement of pigs is stressful to the animal. It has been shown in several research studies that pigs can harbor the virus without any signs of disease, and when stressed, the virus emerges from hiding and is shed into the environment.

The introduction of new animals causes social stress and can lead to re-emergence of the virus in a herd that had been infected and thought clean. Finally, in a herd that has been infected but without apparent disease, bringing new, uninfected animals into the herd introduces a new group of susceptible animals and a new round of disease outbreak.

Usually, the disease is spread between pigs by direct or "nose-to-nose" contact. Several studies of pseudorabies outbreaks have shown that large, confinement, farrow-to-finish operations are more likely to have greater losses than operations that farrow pigs on pasture and have more physical separation between animals.

Direct contact may not be the only way that pseudorabies spreads. Airborne or aerosoled virus between farms has been suggested as the only possible cause of several outbreaks.

Food and bedding can be contaminated with the virus when it comes in contact with infected animals. The same occurs for floors, water, fencing, boots, shoes, and other clothing.

The virus is not particularly hardy outside of its biologic host, the pig; but in the right conditions it can survive long enough in the environment to be spread to uninfected, susceptible animals.

What can you do to limit the spread of pseudorabies? If you run an operation that is free of the disease, the most important thing you can do is maintain a closed herd. Avoid bringing animals from outside into the operation. If you must bring animals into the herd, have them tested for pseudorabies before they arrive to be sure they are negative, quarantine them on arrival, and test them again two weeks after arrival to make sure they are still negative.

Remember that the virus can arrive on your property on boots, tools, feed, water, tires, and clothing. Limit the amount of outside contact, clean boots, and be aware of who is on your farm and where they came from.

If you have the disease, the same recommendations are appropriate. Additionally, try to limit contact between different aspects of the operation; keep the breeding herd separate from the finishing herd. If you can physically separate large units into smaller units and keep them isolated, you can make inroads in preventing further spread.

Vaccination of all animals, not only breeding stock but also finishing animals, may also help to limit spread. Most importantly, be aware of what you do, and what is going on in your community about pseudorabies. Because the disease can spread so easily and in so many ways, vigilance is of the essence.

Tobacco Bed Management, Undercutting Boost Transplant Yield

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Keeping a uniform seed bed, applying the exact amount of fertilizer before transplanting, and undercutting tobacco plants at transplant time are some of the steps in ensuring a profitable tobacco crop, according to Claude McKee.

McKee, a researcher at the Upper Marlboro Research Facility at the University of Maryland, spoke to about 40 tobacco farmers Monday about some of the new tobacco bed management, transplanting, and nitrogen quicktesting under way at the facility.

In the spring of 1990, researchers at the the facility studied different seedbed plots and the affect of clipping them for uniform growth, nitrogen application, and transplanting techniques.

What they found was that clipping the plants about ½ inch above the bud after they are 3 inches tall, a week apart, helps keep the seed bed uniform and provide more plants at transplant time.

Cut the plants

In addition, at transplanting, a special undercutting bar, mounted on a 3-pt. hitch, was allowed to cut the plants about 1-½ inch to 2 inches below the soil surface.

Water was applied to soak the soil about an hour before it was undercut, with about three total passes. What this allowed, according to McKee, was workers pulling the transplants the ability to easily grab handfuls — in McKee's case, increasing his harvesting capability to about 1,000 plants per hour, "roughly double" what it was before.

Claude McKee, a researcher at the Upper Marlboro Research Facility at the University of Maryland, spoke to about 40 tobacco farmers Monday about some of the new tobacco bed management, transplanting, and nitrogen quicktesting under way at the facility.

"There was no resistance when you pulled the plants and the roots were real good," he said. "You could grab three to four at a crack and knock the dirt of them and they were ready to go."

The amount of plants harvested using the proper trimming and undercutting techniques also increased, according to McKee. The researchers harvested about 20,500 plants. "That's a high yield from a tobacco seedbed at one time," McKee said.

Whole-system approach

But McKee said the benefits are obtained only from a whole-system approach. "I think the impressive thing about this system was the root system," he said. "You get basically an undisturbed root system. And you can get a monumental amount of roots compared to what we get if we hoe or pull, even if we pull real well."

Dairy Princess Planning Meetings Next Week

CLARION (Clarion Co.)—A series of regional meetings are scheduled by the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services to begin to plan for the 1991 county promotion programs. Jan Harding, director, said the local dairy promotion committees are invited to attend. As in past years, the state program will provide the information and tools for local activities.

This year, John Rogers, Plum Bottom Dairy, of Belleville, will be the principal speaker. Rodgers is the president of the Pennsylvania Ayrshire Association and an instructor for the Dale Carnegie courses. In addition, other information to be presented will include new materials, programs and approaches from Dairy Council; projected promotions for 1991 by ADA/DC, Mideast, MAMMA and PDPP; funding of promotion efforts and information and materials for 1991 dairy princess contests and activities. All meetings run from 9:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. The meeting locations appear with this article.

Artificial Inseminator Makes Records, Friends

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

MT. JOY (Lancaster Co.) — There are few whose work continues to provide a sense of wonderment and awe throughout their career.

The average American now changes careers at least twice a lifetime, some several more.

But after more than 35 years as an artificial inseminator, Paul Werner, 59, of Mt. Joy, said his job continues to reward him and provide him with a desire — not just a reason — to get up in the morning.

In that time, Werner's enthusiasm for his work has gained him recognition; not just among his clients, peers and bosses, but in the industry.

Last fall Werner became the second-ever to record 100,000 first service insemenations for Atlantic Breeders Cooperative. All in all, he's insementated almost 200,000 cows or heifers.

The day-to-day job, by act, provides little glory. And he gets some good-natured ribbing from his clients, who rely on his expertise to keep their costs down, improve their herd and keep their cows in milk.

Practically a seven-day-a-week proposition, with 5 a.m. starts and unknown quitting times, Werner's working environment is literally the rear end of cows and heifers.

Plastic gloves, insulated liquid nitrogen containers, tubes of frozen semen, injectors, and clipboards of paperwork are always with him, while he drives his compact work car along the backroads of the country side making calls to a number of farms to fulfill his cattle breeding duties.

The job carries the drudgery of routines, such as monotonously washing boots before leaving a farm and heading off to new farms. He carries his own boot brush and bucket.

It's a biosecurity measure to help prevent the spread of disease and parasitism in dairy cattle, in addition to providing a common courtesy to his client dairymen and keeping his car clean.

But he said it's the big picture of his job that keeps him going — the headiness of knowing that he's providing half of the spark that becomes the magic of developing life.

It's the knowledge that he's had a hand in the miracle of reproduction that gives him a reward. He said he never tires of knowing that he's been helping a mysterious instant occur, when the egg of a cow he's trying to make pregnant receives the sperm that carries the DNA molecules.

And he also checks on the resulting calves too; how they turned out and what problems the dam cow may have had during delivery.

Werner also takes a non-arrogant pride in his work. It's a learned skill, but it's also an art.

Doing everything properly, keeping the cow or heifer calm, getting her during the right time of a heat and getting the right placement of semen, all call for subtle judgements that no textbook pictures or passages can accurately convey.

He's planning to retire in about 3 years, when he is 62.

He lives in the house and on the 16 acres that was his father's farm house. He and his wife Betty were married in 1953 and moved into the house in the 1960s.

A pond with largemouth bass is down the hill from his property. He had it built soon after moving into the house in which he was born, but doesn't have much chance to fish.

He said people always ask him what he would do if he retired. "I think I'll be so busy, hunting and fishing, the time will go by even faster than it does now."

In the meantime, however, he said he really enjoys his work and he wouldn't change jobs, if given the opportunity to do it over again.

"When I got out of high school, actually jobs were hard to get," Werner said.

"I started working on a farm two years and then I wasn't making any kind of money there and I knew I had to do something else.

"A friend of mine told me that they had an opening down at Atlantic Breeders. Well, then when I got there they didn't need an inseminator anymore, at that time. But they said they would start me out at maintenance.

"So I was just on maintenance for like two months and then they had an opening. So I jumped in right away. In other words, in April I started under maintenance, and by June I started breeding cows.

"One thing I like, when I was looking around, I wanted an outside job. Being as I'm an outdoor guy, I couldn't see being cooped up in a factory all the time, you know, standing in one spot doing some kind of job.

"And I really enjoy driving around looking at the countryside, and watching these farmers doing their chores.

"Before I got this . . . actually it's only two years that I started working in this particular area home . The fella that was up here, he retired. So, being as I live up here, I got first crack at it," he said.

Now a steady inseminator in one area for Atlantic Breeders, Werner served for most of his career as a "coordinator." A coordinator is a full-time substitute inseminator who works the hours when unit technicians have days off.

"That's all I was for years and years and years," Werner said. "There were times that I more or less concentrated in one area. For the last 10, 15 years probably, I was mainly down around, well anything from New Holland up to Manheim and in through here (Mt. Joy). That was mainly the area that I was working in, but I like that really, moving around that way. You weren't in one spot all the time.

"You kept seeing different fellas, like the coordinator is today. Like, I mean, one day he'll be working up here and the next day he'll be working down in New Holland," he said.

Werner said the travel had side benefits.

"It seemed like the guys are always glad to see you. Being as I was there as long as what I was, there's a confidence thing built in there.

"For years we had so many new guys starting and, ah, they didn't like it. And a year from now they were gone, you know.

"And these farmers hate to see a new guy coming in all the time. That cost them money, because let's face it, they don't have the experience and there're a few cows that're going to repeat because they had a problem with her and whatnot.

"But even though, they do a good job. Well, I had a guy already say to me, 'Gosh I'm glad somebody who knows how to breed cows got here. This is a repeat again of that new guy.'

"So I'll go in, look at the barn chart . . ., it's not a repeat on the new guy. But they got him pegged that was his. It was actually a repeat from me three weeks ago. I'm kidding you not.

"And . . . it is sort of amusing to me, you know, they think that because I'm (experienced I don't have any problems cows)

" . . . of course, the smart guy would say, 'Well, ain't you ever going to learn how to breed cows?'

"But nine out of 10 would look at it the other way and say, 'If you can't get her settled, well who can?'"

The record-making by Werner is nice to have, he said, but doesn't mean he can lay back. Especially since a lot of his work is with Em Tran Inc., one of the first embryo transfer operations in the area that deals with extremely high value cattle.

Working with Em Tran has actually helped him achieve his record, but it has also detracted in a way. Their method of operation is to breed every cow twice within 12 hours, so for every first service he is credited with there, he also gets repeat work.

"Actually, Em Tran helps out. Normally, a guy has number so-an-so cow — number 29 say, or whatever — and in that year you'll only be breeding her one time and everything else'll be a repeat, whatever, till you get her settled.

"But over at Em Tran, I'd say those cows may get bred every three months. If they breed that same cow again, and flush her out again, that's going to be a first again.

"It definitely builds up.. in fact they're a large part of my business up here, really."

Werner is usually on the road, headed toward a farm, at 5 a.m.

He puts in some very long days, sometimes. Sometimes they are shorter. The differences in schedule also help prevent him from being bored with the job.

Throughout a day he frequently calls ABC headquarters to make sure that he doesn't miss any calls from farmers who need his service don't get delayed.

He doesn't get an opportunity to procrastinate, no matter how tired he is. He must fulfill the needs of his customers.

"Whether it's 10 calls or 30 calls, I'm responsible for them. There's no way I can say, 'Hey, I got 30 calls and 10 cows at Em Tran. I need help!'

"Big deal. I don't get help. I work at them until I get them done," Werner said.

And it can happen any day of the week.

And has.

Werner's boss, Dave Zimmerman, is also his friend.

"I've worked with Paul, he's just a great guy. He's done a lot for Atlantic for a lot of years," Zimmerman said.

"For a lot of years he worked in a lot of different parts of Lancaster County. He kind of likes to get around. He settled into the Elizabethtown/Mt. Joy area.

"He would of been one of the guys who trained way back when there were short courses back at Penn State," he said.

ABC serves the southeastern part of Pennsylvania, into Delware and Maryland, Zimmerman explained.

And in the years since the cooperative formed, there was only one other person ever to break the 100,000 first service record. That was Bob McDowell, who has since retired.

"It takes a long time (to make that mark)," Zimmerman said. "It is a goal in this area. It's certianly a realistic goal. But a technician is going to have to look for the 25-, Werner talks over the list of cows to be inseminated with Irvin "Grubby" Meyers at Em Tran Inc.

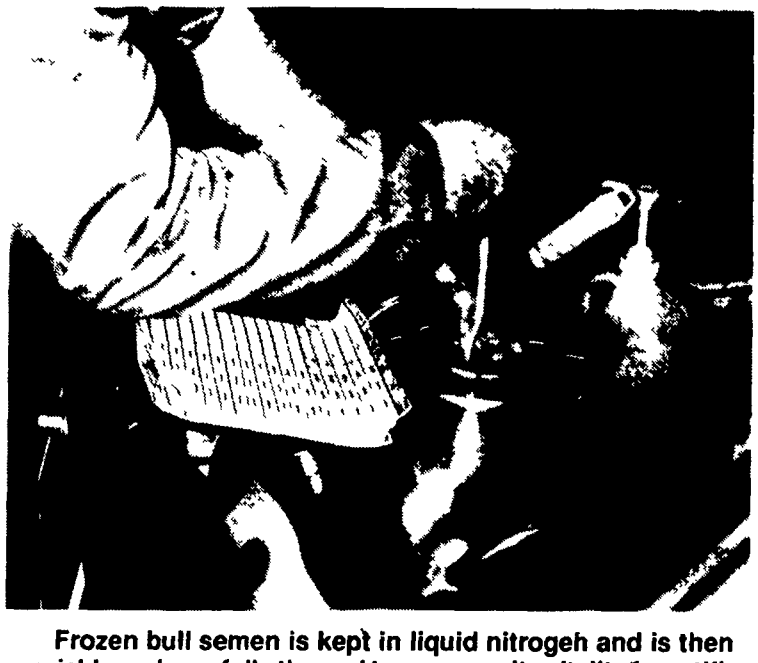
Paul Werner walks from the office building of Em Tran Inc. — a renovated farm house — an embryo transfer operation, carrying a liquid nitrogen container of high valued bull semen. After 35 years on the job, Werner's smile on his face is as constant as is the jug of liquid nitrogen in his hand.



Frozen bull semen is kept in liquid nitrogeh and is then quickly and carefully thawed to preserve its vitality for artificial insemination. Werner is used to handling the sub-zero temperature material and has seen a number of changes in the handling of semen over the years.

ering 27 counties. These technicians provide a variety of services, including scouting (for insects, weeds, and diseases); sampling (soil, manure, and plant); yield checks; calibration; field measuring; management recommendations; crop management reports (including crop summaries, field histories, soil test analyses, and other accounts); crop management planning, including rotation plans, nutrient management schedules, fertilizer and other recommendations; and input cost accounting for established and new crops.

Todd Johnson, manager/technician for the Centre Co. CMA, sweeps an alfalfa stand for potato leafhoppers.

By saving money on using less fertilizer and crops, the farmer can maximize profitability under CMA management.

"We help farmers produce a more quality crop and reduce the use of pestcides," said Joanne Widney, Lehigh Valley CMA crop consultant. From her office in Freemansburg, Pa., Widney manages 18 farms and 3,500 acres. The majority of her clients are dairy farmers, but also include crop, poultry, and hog farms.

Widney manages about 100-500 acres per farm. She hires one full-time scout in the summer for scouting operations. Her goal is to expand to about 6,000 acres before hiring another full-time technician.

Help manage

"We help (the farmers) manage what they're doing," she said. "We're supposed to be able to save about 20 percent, if that means an increase in yield or a decrease in use of fertilizers and pesticides. That's what our goal is."

One of the jobs she is working on at this point in the season is record keeping. The entire system is computerized and field-specific. The forms vary and include one that can record all applications of any spray material, climatic conditions, fertilizer records, and other types of information.

"Each farm is different," said Widney. "Some will use the whole thing, some will just look at net value, some will just pick out certain information they would like to know on each field. It depends on the farmer."

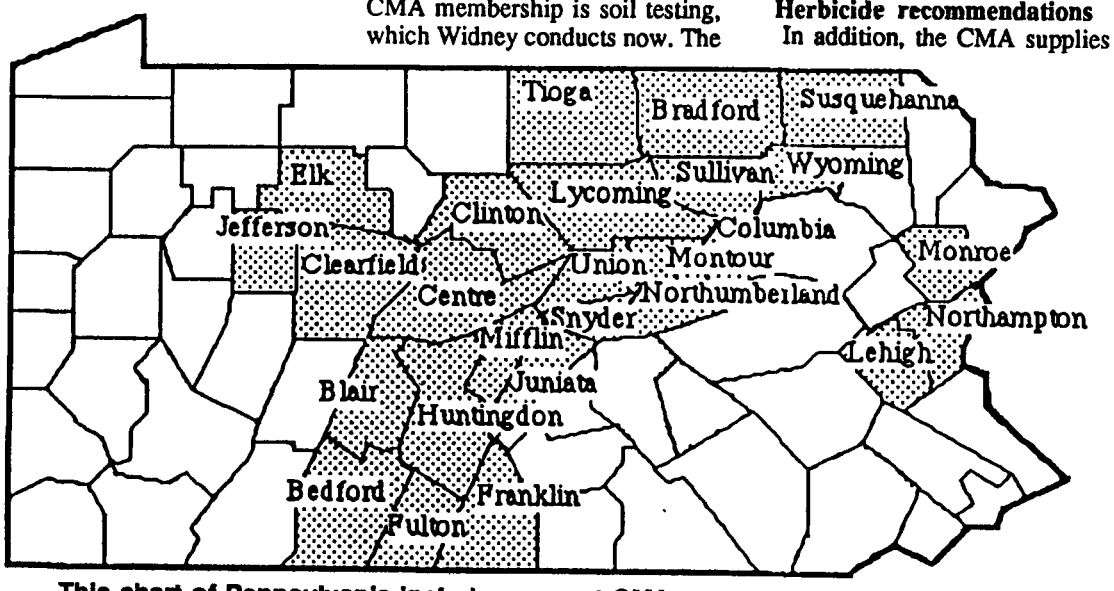
One of the biggest advantages of CMA membership is soil testing, which Widney conducts now. The tests include a stardard soil test for nutrient and mineral levels as well as a nitrogen test when needed.



This chart of Pennsylvania includes current CMA organizations by county. Note that southeastern Pennsylvania, including Lancaster and Lebanon counties, has no CMA.

Herbicide recommendations

In addition, the CMA supplies scouting services and makes recommendations for herbicide application.

"A guy had a soybean field and he used a pre-emergent on his soybeans. And ragweed came through — ragweed was a problem this year, a lot of people had problems with ragweed coming through later, probably because of the weather conditions," said Widney. "But the ragweed came through so bad that he needed a second application of herbicide."

In another case, a nitrate test performed on one field reduced a farmer's application of additional nitrogen at sidedressing, which "saved a lot of money," she said.

Many times, farmers don't realize exactly how much manure they are putting on their soil and what it will mean for their crop.

Manure spread

"I was at Ag Progress Days and they had one guy showing different amounts of manure spread on the ground, and nobody could tell which was which, how many pounds of manure was spread," said Widney.

Widney said she enjoys being outside. "When you see that you've made a recommendation and it has helped — which a lot of people don't have the satisfaction in their job. Working with the farmers is fantastic — they're just very good people."

Todd Johnson is manager/technician of the Centre Co. CMA, which was the first CMA organized in the state.

Johnson began work with the CMA three years ago. He operates from his Bellefonte, Pa. office, managing 52 farms and about 9,000 acres.

Farms interested

"A number of farmers were interested in this type of program," said Johnson. "The farmers saw a need for this type of service."

Johnson said that farmers often will over- or under-fertilize. "We find that by having a program where we soil test on a regular

Your Farm Credit Banker. Nobody Knows The Field Better.

Sure, you'll find Farm Credit bankers all buttoned up, ready to talk short- or long-term loans, mortgages and sophisticated lines of credit

But underneath the shirt and tie, you'll find the one thing the other banks don't offer. A fellow farmer

Most Farm Credit loan officers were born and raised on farms and got their college degrees from ag schools. Nearly all of them grew up with 4-H and the Future Farmers of America.

And if that's not enough, every single one of our loan officers goes through the toughest ag lending training program in America.

That means when you talk to a Farm Credit loan officer about any kind of ag loan, you won't have to waste your time translating to someone who's book smart but farm foolish.

What's more, because Farm Credit loan officers understand farming as well as they understand finances, they're not only smarter, they're faster. After all, they have the same loan closing authority as many local bank presidents.

So when you need competitive rates or creative options, see your local Farm Credit banker. Because nobody knows the field better.

State DHIA Reports

management program was developed. The association introduced labor efficient records programs, signed a new agreement with Penn State, offered forage analysis through Northeast DHIA and sent out the first herd profile reports.

A new member recognition program was introduced that is based on management improvement on the farm and changed monthly herd rankings from fat to protein.

Fifty-two weeks of the Focus column in Lancaster Farming were developed, and the quality of the samples that arrive at the lab was improved. Old lab equipment was replaced.

Barth said members, directors and staff were to be thanked for the record 1990 year. He said the association got rid of many counter productive items and began to focus on other inputs and innovations that developed fiscal responsibility and alliances with other organizations. Barth said quality must come first and then the price for service will follow.

"DHIA must respond to our competition," Barth said, "and members must insist on professionalism on the farm. Supervisors must do a better job of having clean boots and clean milking meters when they come to the farm. The association must help members achieve maximum return on their investment in records and find good employees who will stay with the association.

"I was pleased what we did this year," Barth said. "But it gives me no real satisfaction because I always see the challenges for us as a staff to improve services even more."

Barth said the challenges include asking how we are going to keep the Pennsylvania dairy farmers competitive with other areas in the nation and internationally. He said we need to learn to plan before a crisis develops and we need to try to develop common vision for Pennsylvania's dairy industry that is fragmented and often going in different directions.

Robert Kindig, national director, listed objectives for the national association that include the need to assist regional DHIAs to increase market share and improve their internal operations; to encourage more efficient ways to collect farm data; to encourage the adoption of new technologies and to insure that members receive high quality management information.

Kindig said the quality certification service continues to be the most significant program developed by the National DHIA.

Bill Jackson reported on new programs and the organization's goals.

The heifer management program released January 1 looks promising and has received more interest from members than any other program recently introduced. The new forage analysis program with Northeast DHIA offers opportunity if you want to test forages along with your DHIA program. Jackson said they were still working on the nutrition program and have customized reports and labor efficient records ready to go.

William Itle

Jackson listed top DHIA goals to include: 12 more counties merged in the state association; computer billing for direct members; computer payroll system for direct employees and a one percent market share increase.

Frank Orner said it is important to hear from members if there are policies that are not working in the field. He discussed the field service policies for quarantined herds that include stringent precautions to prevent spreading the disease to other herds. He reported that the association will not purchase used member-owned equipment. Reinstatement of records from herds under suspension will not take place prior to the date of action by the board, and he clarified the family relationships under which a supervisor may not test a herd.

Gary Truckenmiller reported total revenues coming into the association for 1990 at $3,376 million and total assets of $1,606 million. Margin for the year was $13,000 up from a $22,000 loss last year. The average number of cow records processed monthly was listed at 342,700.

President Bill Itle discussed the joint resolution by Pennsylvania and Northeast DHIA associations that calls for the users of DHIA records to pay for these records as part of the solution to finance the DHIA system. Bob Kindig said the national association had acknowledged the need but resolved that the solution should be national made with fiberglass, the material of the future — and proven in the past —

The Fiberdome chute is designed and engineered to be installed on most types of silos. Its structure allows it to withstand the toughest beating the weather elements or silo unloading systems can possibly dish out.

The chute is constructed in full 7½' sections to minimize the number of joints. Connecting joints have a 2½" tongue and groove design to keep feed in and water out. The large ribbed construction adds stability and strength.

Fiberglass is durable, corrosion-proof, attractive and translucent, allowing sunlight to pass through. Sunlight quickly dries interior moisture in the chute. The hard gleaming gelcote surface will remain for many years.

Artificial Inseminator

30-, or 40-year mark in order to get there.

"We're looking at all the cows Paul bred, it would be more than double that. It's possible some other are on there way. We have some technicians breed 4,000 a year. (Paul's average is slightly above that).

According to Zimmerman, it's not only Paul's expertise in artificially inseminating cows that helps reduce the number of repeat breedings that have to be done, it's also the ability of the farmer to detect when a cow or heifer is in heat.

"Really it's some of both, however, the cow being in shape, the cow being in a proper standing heat, that's the biggest factor. On the other hand you need a technician who is going to go through the proper steps.

"That's one of the strengths of Werner, he's been more careful and is very concerned about getting a first service calf than many others. He's been real concerned to have to get as few repeats as possible over the years.

From the business end, Paul Werner helps the image of ABC. In fact, during the cooperative's many annual district meetings held recently, the quality of service provided through the technicians is almost as important as being able to provide its members with high quality bull semen at reasonable prices.

"What we look at each month is a non-return rate," Zimmerman said. "And Paul Werner has pretty much been one of the higher technicians for a long time.

Paul also helps out in other ways.

"We have extensive training courses and programs today as well as monthly training meetings that Paul will get involved in," Zimmerman said. "We will often call on him to give advice as far with genetic process. And Paul's been able to help out these younger guys quite a lot, really."

Zimmerman has his own affection for Paul, as many do.

"I've known Paul for close to 17 or 18 years.

"That's when I started with the company, and I worked in the county as well. I've gotten to know Paul way back then. And we even do some deer hunting. If he's not breeding cows, he's somewhere deer hunting.

"The big thing that Paul has king of taught me, and I've really respected him for it, well there are two things.

"He gets out early in the morning, every morning. And he gives the dairyman the kind of service and type of service they expect.

"He personally feels that one of the biggest reasons he has had the kind of success he has, is that he gives them what they want. He really lives and believes Atlantic Breeders.

"And it's also the way he . . . does those little extra things he does on the farm. He does more than breed cows. He'll help turn out heifers when he's done, and giving it really all revolves around service," Zimmerman said.

"If it means working later at night, earlier in the morning, odd times on weekends or holidays, Paul is always there to do it."

The Topics/The Speakers/National DHI

Milestones In Dairy Technology

Steve Spencer, Professor of Dairy Science at Penn State, is a leading authority on milking system technology, and is extensively used as a resource by equipment manufacturers on an international level. He will start the Symposium with a retrospective view of dairy technology, setting the stage for future developments.

Electronic Identification Implants

Sid Spahr, at the University of Illinois, has developed the most advanced research and test facility for electronic identification systems. He has been deeply involved in the joint DHIA/Holstein Association development of field tests for the new ID implants.

Dr. Spahr will describe the ID implant technology, both the pros and cons. The current status of field testing will be discussed. The major developers will also be represented.

The 1991 Model Year - A Peek At The DRPC's New Products

Larry Jones not only serves as Extension Dairy Specialist in New York, but has been extensively involved across the country in leading-edge systems for the interpretation of dairy records.

Not all DRPCs were created equal, and Dr. Jones will expose the best features available in selected areas, giving DHIA's decision-making leaders an opportunity to evaluate the need for new services in their own region.

Expert Systems - Forget The Hype, They Work!

Tom Cannon is one of a growing number of dairy nutritionists strongly linked to DHIA. Although he operates internationally, he is well-regarded at home for harnessing the DHIA database for effective herd management.

Most striking, however, is his increased use of expert system tools, such as the lactation curve analyzer. Mr. Cannon will describe how these tools have boosted the profitability of his clients.

A Solution To The Educational Crisis

New technology and tools will be released at an increasing pace. But, why do dairymen in different states adopt, and benefit from, new technology at different rates?

John White probes these questions, and will relate how dairymen can directly affect the level of support in order to gain a competitive edge. While department head at Virginia Tech, Dr. White operated an educational fund that helped unite the dairy industry in a mid-size dairy state.

of people who are lactose intolerant.

Can you pass the message to the dairy interests that their traditional "Drink Milk" ads are ignored by the lactose intolerant people of America? In other woods the dairy council is wasting money with traditional ads among those who are lactose intolerant.

Joe Francis
Westminster, MD.

Editor:

I would like to add something to the two letters in the February 23 issue. As a dairy farmer in Somerset Co., I am very concerned about milk prices. According to USDA statistics the all milk (whatever use) price was 57% of parity and that was before the horrendous drop we have seen since late fall.

The present pricing system for milk is ridiculous and I don't believe we will see anything better until the government is out of it. Does the government control pricing for Ford, G.M., Chrysler, IBM, etc? Of course not, and they wouldn't tolerate it if the government tried.

Our pricing could be as simple as following the parity statistics compiled by USDA and setting the level at the percent of parity that would give dairy farmers a fair return for their labor, costs, and investments. All our coops would have to get together to do this. Then the figure would be adjusted by regions according to percentage going to different classes. Any surplus we would not be paid for, we would all put in a small amount to have the surplus powdered and then give it to charitable organizations to help the poor and hungry.

basis, we find that we're able to keep the lime requirements and nutrient levels in good balance."

Of the 52 farms, a majority are dairy farmers, said Johnson. But there are also beef cattle, crop, and hog farms.

The savings to farmers can be enormous. In the case of one new member, according to Johnson, after a soil test was conducted, only 100 pounds of starter fertilizer per acre was recommended for his soil. The farmer originally planned to put down 300 pounds per acre.

Saved $16.25/acre

During 1990, Lehigh Valley CMA farmers, prior to becoming CMA members, routinely sprayed alfalfa twice during the growing season. They were able to save $16.25 per acre of their alfalfa crops by spraying only when economic threshold levels were reached.

In Centre Co., where insect pressure in alfalfa was slightly greater, CMA members saved $15.50 per alfalfa acre.

Johnson said, "The money farmers save in improved crop management covers the cost of the CMA fee.

"Farmers realize that it really pays to belong to a CMA," he said. "We can keep track of agronomic information on the farm. We give the farmer a helping hand."

CMA directors

Widney works under a board of directors of the CMA and an adviser. Managers are hired locally to support the farms.

For farmers interested in forming a CMA, the first thing is to find out how much interest you have in it, said Widney.

"Get an extension agent involved in soliciting, and see how many people would be interested," she said. From there, farmers can arrange for the hiring of a technician and other staff.

"The nice thing about us is, number one, we're nonprofit," she said. "So we're not a business. All our money goes basically to paying my salary, paying any expenses, and that's it. We're not out there making money. Secondly, we're backed by Penn State, so we have all their research facilities right at hand. Many of the professors out there are really willing to help and do help out a lot."

The Lehigh CMA can be reached at 408 Main St., Freemansburg, PA 18017, (215) 866-7410. The Centre Co. CMA can be reached at Cooperative Extension, Willow Bank Building, Bellefonte, PA 16823, (814) 355-4897.

Farmers in the Lancaster, Lebanon, and York areas could start a CMA, according to the managers, by organizing and getting in touch with Pruss. She can be reached at the Penn State College of Agriculture, 116 Agricultural Science and Indistries Building, The Pennsylvania State University, University Park, PA 16802, (814) 863-1020.

Tobacco Bed Management

In order to see exactly how many plants were usable, the researchers "sat down and graded them," he said.

They found that 50 to 75 percent of the plants were usable.

For the bed cutting, McKee said a hand or push mower could be used with extension legs on it. A mower would also require some sort of clipping bag.

Quicktests

In addition, the research facility conducted nitrogen quicktests on the plots, including two weeks after transplanting, at topping, and at harvest.

Using a special quality index that determined federal grades of Maryland tobacco, various nitrogen, yield, and overall value rates were determined.

What the researchers found was that applying too little fertilizer reduced the overall value; too much also had a negative effect.

The best rate, for the sandy type soils at the Upper Marlboro research station, were about 90 pounds per acre of a sodium nitrate starter fertilizer applied before transplanting. The results were 1,806 pounds per acre at harvest at a quality index of 41 and an overall value of 825.

Nitrogen available

During the first year, according to McKee, farmers should "have at least a little bit of nitrogen available at topping, but you'd like to have it practically all gone by the time you get to harvest."

At another location, the highest volume of yield had the lowest nitrogen rate applied all before transplanting — a field on which manure was previously applied.

At the manured location, McKee said that the results warrent "more test work and I think that, for this coming year, we're going to be looking at a test before any fertilizer is applied so we will know what kind of nitrogen we got," he said. "What we are really shooting for is to limit the initial nitrogen application."

The researchers will use a quicktest to get "a rough idea of how much fertilizer we should put down in sidedressing to get the desired amount of nitrogen," he said.

rather than regional in coverage. A committee of dairy industry leaders has already met in early February and has set the following goals: 1. Sharing costs and benefits of services should be done equitably. 2. Additional market driven services, which maintain credible information, should be developed. 3. Public research and education should continue to receive support.

At the awards banquet, John Rogers gave an inspirational presentation.

Awards were given to: James Dunn, Schuylkill County, most improved herd, milk and protein. Steven Clapper, Blair County, most improved herd, fat. Smyser's Richlawn Farm, York County, high herd milk. Valewood Dairy Cambria County, lowest SCC, over 100 cows. Empet Farms, Susquehanna County, lowest SCC, under 100 cows.

Dr. Lawrence Specht, Penn State University, received special recognition for his work on the heifer management program. Richard Hopps, Berks County director, was honored for nine years of service on the board of directors.

veterinarian from Penn State, said that the fight agains bacteria will always be present wherever animals are housed. He explained the microbial ecology and its effects on food safety.

Leon Ressler, nutrient management agent, explained the results of the manure marketing survey and urged farmers who wanted to sell or buy fertilzer to add their names to the list. At present there are more names on the list for requests for manure than those who want to get rid of it.

Dr. Andy Yersin, assistant professor of poultry science at Penn State, shared his impressions of the county's poultry industry, and Dr. Jack Gelb of the department of animal science and agricultural biochemistry in Delaware, told about bronchitis and its new variant strains.

While producers learned what they can do to improve the poultry industry of the future, they also reviewed the past efforts that have made them successfu. Twenty-two poultry families received plaques for keeping the poultry family spirit alive during the past two to five generations.

Jay Irwin said the Poultry Association hatched the idea to award producers who have kept the poultry spirit alive through two generations or more.

Those recognized for keeping the farm active for five generations or more were named sapphire award winners. These included Thomas F. McKelvey of Holtwood established in 1845; and Esbenshade Turkey Farm of Paradise, the oldest turkey farm in the state was established in 1858.

Yield increase

Also at the meeting, John Yocum, senior research associate at the Penn State Southeast Research Facility, said that farmers can obtain a 400-500 pound yield increase using pesticides over simple cultivation.

What his research determined was that various types of pesticides do not produce great yield differences; that some herbicides are dependent greatly on soil pH in order to work properly; and that cultivation does not do much for grass control.

Cultivation or hoe checks did not work well against various weeds, including nutsedge, pigweed, lambsquarters, or most grasses.

"Low input agriculture may or may not be better," he said. "In some cases, it's better to use herbicide applications rather than just cultivation or handhoeing."

Family Farm Has Place

David Kohl, professor of agricultural finance at Virginia Tech.

He reiterated and said he supported much of what Block had told them. He said agriculture will prosper in the 1990s.

He said some people are saying that agriculture is making a return to the position of the 1970s, but that he disagrees. He said inflation and tax laws that were beneficial to farmers then are now gone.

"We had the competitive edge in the world because of chemicals."

The 1980s. The whole decade the rest of the world caught up. Tax laws were changed to discourage investment into agriculture, energy and manufacturing."

But the 1990s are "bullish" for eight reasons, according to Kohl.

• Farm debt to net farm income ratio is the lowest since the late 1950s. American agriculture is poised and positioned to take advantage of markets.

Anytime the total debt to farm income exceeds a 5 to 1 ratio, agriculture is in trouble, Kohl said. He said in the 1980s it was a high as $13 of debt for every $1 of income.

Now that ratio is $2.57 of debt for every $1 of income. "We're not debt-ridden.

He said the rule of thumb in any business is that those who will survive the longest are the ones who carry the least debt.

• The variable costs of farm production is 15 percent lower than in 1980. Fixed costs are above world levels. "A major strategic challenge is to get fixe cost back to world levels."

• The dependence on farm programs is cut in half since 1986. According to Kohl, in Iowa in mid-1980s, 75 percent of the farms were on federal programs. He said a farmer could make $3.82 an hour if he actually grew corn, but could make in excess of $300 an hour if he did not, and was on a farm program.

With the cuts in farm programs spending, those who are depending heavily on target-price deficit reimbursements, or subsidies to not produce type of programs are going to be at higher risk in keeping the businesses financially sound.

• The best farm managers are in best resource areas of the United States.

He said that farms on marginal areas, without good or adequate resources, have either failed or may fail and that the bulk of exisiting farms are actually on the best farmland and have the best water and other resources nearby.

• Farm exports are benefitting from the low value of the dollar.

Furthermore, Kohl said U.S. agriculture should probably be looking at producing vegetables and products suited for the needs of the Asian market, instead of the European-influenced products that now dominate American agricultural production.

• Ag will benefit from technology wave that will occur in mid-1990s. High tech and high touch, Kohl repeated several times. He said there is a strong need for Americans to learn how to really use and understand the newer techonolgy they are working with now in order to be competitive. As an illustration, he asked for a show of hands as to how many in the audience owned video-cassette recorders. A majority of people responded. He asked how many know how to program their VCRs to record shows and had extremely few responses.

He said that those who do use high technology will be the ones who prosper.

"You're going to be continually frustrated," Kohl said. "But is offers (business) opportunities to use it and not use it. It has both markets."

• The Gross National Product of agriculture will increase 16 percent by the 21st century. There are more value-added products.

In a futuristic prediction, Kohl said farmers are going to growing not just standard agricultural products on their farms, but microbes. And with the higher demand for specialized education, the demand for people in agriculture is going to increase, he said.

• Land or real estate valued in speculative areas will slow. Values for prime farm land, to be used as farmland, will see steady increases.

He expects the slow down in rural growth, not necessarily from fuel price increases on commuters, but because homeowners in dense population areas who are seeking to build in the country, won't be able to sell their in-town property.

In other areas, Kohl said that the USA economy went into a recession in the fourth quarter of 1990, and the impacts will still be felt.

He said that recessions start with a psychological adjustment and then follow with a demographic adjustment.

In this case, what is hurting the economy is "an over-bloated service sector and government," Kohl said.

He said he expects sever cuts in both industries and said that one out of three white collar jobs could be lost.

Giving Women Experience Managing Family Finances

"Women need financial experience." I must say that at 20 workshops each year. Well, for families across Pennsylvania that wisdom became crystal clear as military reserve units were called to active duty this past winter.

Because their spouses had been called up, many women (and some men) had new responsibilities thrust on them. I've heard conversations about "power of attorney", new life insurance policies, renegotiated mortgage rates, and tax waivers.

Can you imagine facing these decisions, having never previously dealt with the family finances? Can you imagine facing them alone?

It's no fun. We need to be aware of those around us who may be facing some of these challenges because of the war. We should offer our support. But those of us who are women should also take a few preventive steps so that we don't find ourselves in a similar position in the future.

Why am I focusing this column on women? Women outlive men in marriages by eight years. There are five times as many widows as widowers in the "over 65" population. Also, two out of four marriages end in divorce. A 1989 research study showed that women's income was 73% lower after a divorce. (A divorced mother's income is only 13% of a divorced father's income on an average.)

Whether it's because of separation due to war or other employment changes, divorce, a medical emergency, or death of a spouse, most women will have to manage a family's finances at some point. I believe all women should take a practice run at it while they have someone to lead them through the process — someone who can answer their questions, show them the filing systems, and remind them of deadlines.

Many of you women may be the primary financial managers in your home. But for those of you who are not, here's how you can gain some valuable, sanity-preserving experience.

If you haven't filed your taxes for 1990, begin with that. Ask your husband or the key money manager in your home to review the records and forms with you. It's a way to get an overview of yearly expenses. Volunteer to be a "gofer" — to organize the W-2's and 1099's, to dig for paper work or records of charitable deductions. (Be prepared for some tense moments. For the person who does this all the time, this kind of job may be simple, but for you it may be confusing.)

During the spring, offer to pay the bills, review the bank statements, and reconcile the bank account for a three-month period.

When you car insurance is due or when the inspection and registration are being renewed, you do it. If nothing else, at least review the forms when they come in.

Granted, for the novice, this may be scary. Just learn one small part at a time. Ask your husband to make a list of all his professional advisers — lawyer, insurance agent, tax preparer, employee benefits coordinator.

It DOES simplify household management to have one financial manager. But all members of a family should be included in financial decisions. Spouses should be consulted when changes are being made to the system. They should also be updated on the files and financial status of the home, farm or family business, too. But that job can be rotated or shared.

A husband is NOT protecting his wife by taking care of all the finances. Likewise, wives who are the primary bill-payers should occasionally brief their husbands on the finances, too. It's amazing how periodic conversations can build a sense of stability and understanding.

Yes, at first it may be frustrating and time-consuming but so is teaching a child to pick up her toys! Just think... when you're faced with that unexpected crisis, it will be easier to cope because you san say, "I did it before, I can do it now."

Widows: Can They Survive On The Family Farm

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

This is the second article in a series about the obstacles widows face to remain on the family farm.

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — "When you lose your partner, you lose security. All you have left are your dreams, and the government and banks even try to take that away from you," said Martha, who asked that her name be changed to protect those involved in her story.

When sudden death claimed Martha's husband, he was less than 40 years old. Martha clung to the dream that they had shared — to farm for life on their Lancaster County farm.

"I knew that I wanted to keep farming, but I didn't know how. I thought if I could just hang in there and buy time until my 10-year-old son grew up to farm, then things would be fine."

Friends and acquaintances urged Martha to sell the dairy farm.

She protested. "But I love farming. It is the only job that I know. Why start something new at 40? I lost my husband. I don't want to lose my other love — farming."

"For the first few days after her husband's death, family and neighbors helped her milk the cows and pack eggs.

"But I knew I couldn't expect other people to help me on a regular basis. They had their own lives, their own work to do," Martha said.

Determined to handle the farm with the help of two part-time hired hands, Martha rose at dawn to begin each day's chores.

One day as she and her son struggled to force a stubborn cow to swallow a pill, her son burst into tears. "Mom," he sobbed. "We can't do this without Dad. It's too hard."

One day as she and her son struggled to force a stubborn cow to swallow a pill, her son burst into tears. "Mom," he sobbed. "We can't do this without Dad. It's too hard."

Martha paused, similar fears tore at her resolve, but she swallowed hard and assured her son, "Of course, we can't do everything as good as Dad, but between the two of us, we can do it."

The transition to farming without her husband was far from easy. The daily work and the machinery repair that her husband had done, now required paid labor, which meant less profit for the farm.

In addition, Martha said, "Hired help did not like taking orders from me — I was a woman."

Banking obstacles

Despite the obstacles, there was one thing Martha expected she could still count on — the bank. She and her husband had maintained a good relationship with the bank. Since she had always taken care of the bookkeeping end, she did not foresee that her husband's death would change her relationship with the bank.

"I was wrong," Martha said.

"The bank couldn't seem to understand my situation. They thought I should be making as much profit as before. They didn't understand that I had to get more income to offset the overhead of paying hired help for work that my husband had done."

Martha figured that if she built another chicken house, she could double the amount of layers. The extra income would make her farm a more profitable operation. Ordinarily, with the assets she had, the banks would have approved this move, but they told her to wait.

After several years, the bank insisted that Martha participate in the dairy buyout program with the promise that she could build another chicken house.

Although disappointed to lose her cows, Martha followed the bank's advice.

"I thought the bank should know what's best for me. I thought they were looking out for me," said Martha.

A few months later, she became convinced otherwise. According to Martha, the bank had insisted that she put all her assets in its care.

The banker threw his pen down and walked out.

Later, he said, "Hey, this CD is

When Martha tried to settle her estate, IRS told her that although the insurance premium was paid from a joint checking account, she could not prove that she had income in her name; therefore, the insurance money was really her husband's and the settlement had to be added to the estate and be taxed.

The transfer included a certificate of deposit that she had at another bank.

At first, she argued, "I don't want to give this up. It's for the old lady someday."

The banker assured her that the transfer was merely a technicality, that the money would stay in the CD, that the only difference was that it would be held by them.

Martha believed the bankers. She transferred the CD.

Then the 1983 drought forced Martha to buy corn. In 1984, avian influenza hit Martha's chickens.

"The government took my chickens and without chickens I had no income for three months," Martha said.

Bills were due. Martha said, "I thought I could visit my friendly banker and get a loan to carry me over since I had a lot of equity."

She was wrong.

The bankers instructed her to tell the fertilizer companies and feed mill that she could pay only half of her bills or the bank would foreclose on her.

Convinced that it was morally wrong not to pay her debts, Martha refused to tell her creditors the bank's mandate.

She argued that there was no reason why she could not recoup her losses as soon as she had chickens again. She pointed out that she had a two-to-one ratio on assets against liability.

The bank remained adamant.

Irate, Martha challenged, "You are asking my creditors to do something you are unwilling to do. If you forgive half my debt then I will ask my creditors to do likewise."

signed over to us. We'll just use that."

Martha bitterly recounts, "There went my money for retirement."

Martha claims that she went to two other banks that told her that she would have no problem borrowing the amount of money she wanted from them, but when they heard she was a woman farming alone, they told her that she was better off staying with her current bank.

She went to the Farmers Home Administration, which gave her money to pay the remainder of debt the same week she applied.

A Pawn

But Martha's problems were far from over. Three months later, she went to the bank to borrow money to buy chickens. She was refused. The bank insisted that she get a contract from a feed mill.

That was five years ago. Martha is still angry. She said, "You can't get ahead on a contract. The bank controls me. It's unfair. The banks are sticking with the feed mills."

Martha said that the bank accuses her of doing things that she doesn't show on paper. She denies it. "I couldn't do that or I'd get in trouble with the government. The only thing I did not tell the bank was about a piece of land that I own with two other people. I didn't tell them about it because it isn't mine. Two other people have claim to that land."

Widow's Tax

Martha is also disturbed with the state widow's tax. Current legislation in Pennsylvania requires a widow to pay six percent tax on her husband's share of property when it is transferred to the surviving spouse.

"The widow is treated unfairly. She must pay tax on equity that she worked for," Martha said.

To pay the tax often causes a cash flow problem and some lawmakers are attempting to have this changed. Most states do not have this tax.

When Martha's husband died, federal tax rules stated that she was allowed $250,000 of property to be transferred tax-free. Today that amount has been raised to $600,000.

"That sounds like a lot of money," Martha said. "But when you have two farms, livestock, and equipment, the IRS appraisal soon adds up. It isn't right to tax widows for something they worked to get."

Martha thought the will and paperwork were in order when her husband died. But the IRS found a problem.

"When my husband was living, everything was ours jointly. But the cows were registered in his name; every sales slip was in his name; the money from the milk check was in his name, even the insurance premium was in his name."

But whenever Martha admires the rolling farmland that surrounds her, her glance invariably settles on her chicken houses and she vows, "I won't be content until I own the birds in those houses."

When Martha tried to settle her estate, IRS told her that although the insurance premium was paid from a joint checking account, she could not prove that she had income in her name; therefore, the insurance money was really her husband's and the settlement had to be added to the estate and be taxed.

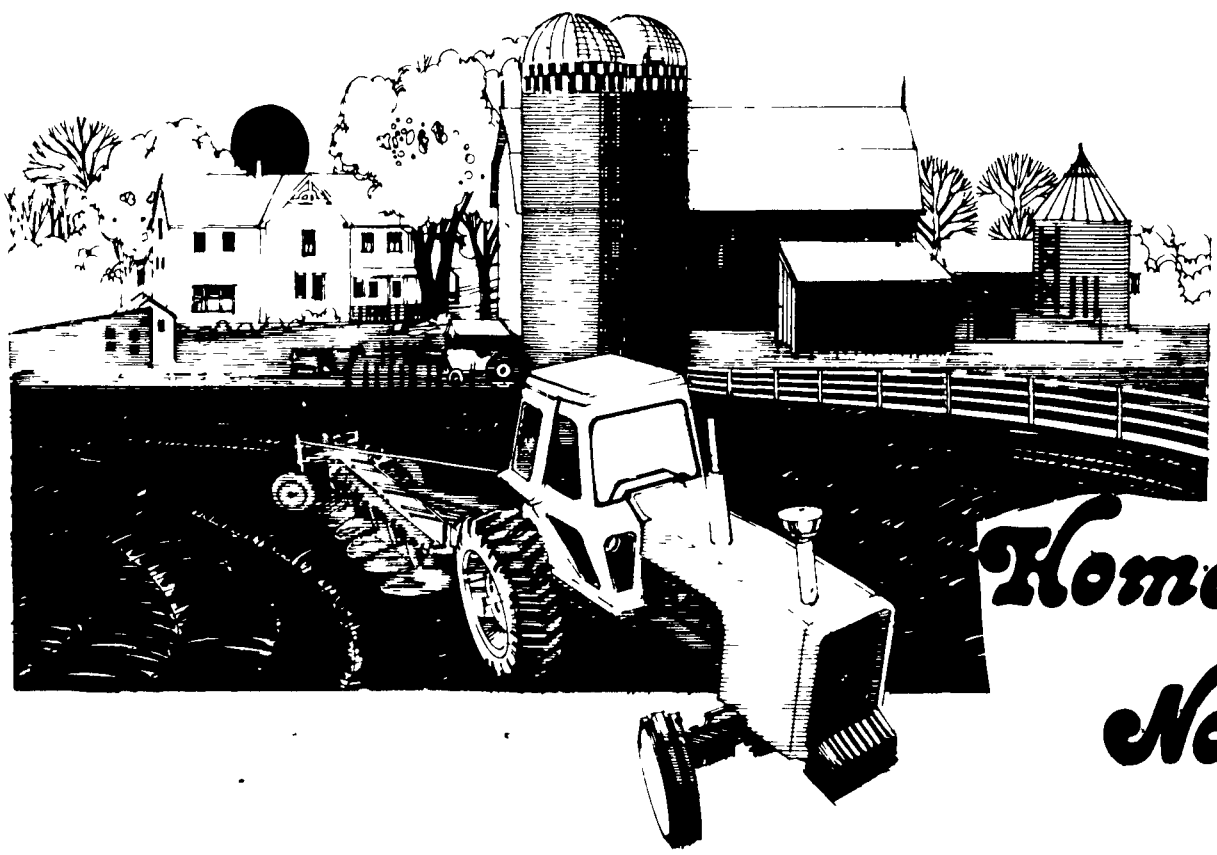
"I tell every woman to make sure her name is on some form of income before her husband dies," Martha said. "It will save her lots of financial troubles."

Martha has checked out options to improve her financial worth.

"If I put this place on an ag preserve, I'd be debt-free, but I will never sell easements," Martha contends. "I feel farmers will regret it later if they take the money. If farming doesn't change, it won't pay, and banks won't lend. Then we'll just have open space."

Despite her troubles, Martha still loves farming. "It's the best job in the world, it just pays the poorest," she said.

But whenever Martha admires the rolling farmland that surrounds her, her glance invariably settles on her chicken houses and she vows, "I won't be content until I own the birds in those houses."



Homestead Notes

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Webster will soon have to put out a new dictionary edition.

In our haste to rush through life, we've managed to abbreviate half the English language. This tendency to alphabetize pokes its confusing fingers into every facet of daily existence.

We watch TV, take vacations in RV's, recreate around the countryside on ATV's, drive BMW's (not me) and fine-tune our motors with STP. We attend to business and personal recordkeeping on PC's, keep in touch with AT&T and MCI, and handle transactions via FAX and MODEM's.

The Middle East war added yet more letterization to our lingo with the likes of TOW missle equipment, MRE's (Meals Ready to Eat) and the infamous SCUD weaponry.

Every industry has its own alphabet soup jargon, dairy farming included. Our cattle are bred with AI (artificial insemination) and sometimes need surgery to correct DA's (Displaced Abomasum, or twisted stomach condition). We vaccinate against BVD (Bovine Viral Diarrhea), IBR (Infectious Bovine Rhinotracheitis) and PI3 (ParaInfluenza).

A myriad of regulations on dairying originate from USDA, FDA, CCC, while prices hinge on the M-W, a pricing mechanism through which the entire country's farm milk prices are based on those paid by a handful of cheese plants in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

But just last week, I ran across a letterized description that slid with a perfect fit into my life. It's the acronym for an affliction from which I've long suffered, but never had a label for. But now the truth can come out.

I suffer from CRS.

Since I first read of CRS in the newsletter of American Agri-Women, my initial suspicion was that it mostly affects farm wives. But probably not. My own symptoms include frequent scratching of the head, intently staring off into space, and a periodic lost and/or panic-stricken look which contorts my facial features.

These are no doubt classic symptoms of CRS... Can't Remember Stuff.

Some sufferers neglect paying electric bills, let their cars run out of gas, and on bad days, may misplace a kid or two. (There are days when a Mom could be tempted, y'know.)

I've never misplaced a kid, but did on one occasion temporarily lose my mother (in a giant shopping mall). And we frequently lose The Farmer, as witnessed by the callers and crop-ins asking "Is The Farmer around?" He usually isn't.

Missed appointments, run-out subscriptions, expired auto inspections are all symptomatic of CRS. Opening the refrigerator door, or traipsing to the basement or attic, then standing there trying to remember your original purpose for the trip, are also familiar symptoms.

It was the chicken that clinched my diagnosis.

My favorite local supermarket packages cold and frozen items separately from the rest of the groceries, making it easy to grab that bag first and deal with it immediately upon arrival in the kitchen.

Last week, after chatting through the express line with a fellow dairy farm wife who was running the register, I grabbed my bag of groceries and hauled it home. Only on arrival did I miss the second bag in which the chicken had been carefully packed, necessitating a trip right back to the store where she had immediately made sure -- bless her -- that my forgotten poultry was refrigerated.

Sunday morning I sat down in church, having finished calf chores after first readying the chicken for roasting. The first hymn was barely sung when I realized the oven was busily heating -- while the roast-ready chicken remained on the bottom shelf of the fridge. We ate Spaghetti Surprise.

I've suffered with CRS long enough to know a cure is unlikely. With strict adherence to regular doses of MLL, though, it's possible to live with it.

MLL. Make Lotsa' Lists.

And keep spaghetti on hand.

Low-Fat Ground Beef

Industry investment through the beef checkoff has led to the development of low-fat ground beef technologies, with some products already undergoing foodservice and federal school lunch trials. Now, a national consumer survey indicates that knowledge of the low-fat beef products has gone beyond the laboratory and board room. In fact, national interest in low-fat ground beef is keen.

Results from a nationwide survey, conducted by The Gallup Organization on behalf of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, were reported during a low-fat ground beef information symposium, Feb. 11-12, in Baton Rouge, LA.

The study found the average consumer is much more aware o low-fat ground beef than the industry had anticipated. Among those surveyed, 38 percent of the people were aware of a low-fat ground beef product, and 25 percent were aware that low-fat ground beef was being test marketed in foodservice outlets.

The survey also revealed that while there was a high awareness of low-fat ground beef, specific knowledge of the products is less impressive. When consumers were asked, "What have you heard about low-fat ground beef?", only 10 percent said that it was healthier.

"This is definitely a marketing issue," says Sheila Courington, director of market research for the National Live Stock and Meat Board, and project director. "There is high awareness, but not a lot of knowledge. When this product takes off, it's going to need a lot of information-building in the process."

The national survey also asked if consumers would be interested in purchasing low-fat ground beef. When given a description of the products, 87 percent of those asked said they would be willing to try it. When asked if they would be willing to try low-fat ground beef hamburger in a restaurant, 45 percent said yes; in a retail setting, 60 percent of those polled said they would be willing to try low-fat ground beef.

"The survey also found that there is a very positive net effect on beef, in general, created by the positive attitudes about low-fat ground beef," says Chuck Jones, a Wyoming cattleman and chairman of the Meat Board beef market research subcommittee. "I think this is extremely beneficial news for our industry."

Consumer market research is a checkoff-funded program managed on behalf of the beef industry by the Beef Industry Council of the Meat Board, a federation of 44 state beef councils that works to build demand for beef through programs of promotion, research and consumer information.

Nutrition In A Nutshell

Peanuts are 26 percent protein and contain no cholesterol. Unsalted, they qualify as low sodium food. Peanuts supply dietary fiber or roughage valuable in the body's waste elimination process.

Peanut butter is made up of at least 90 percent peanuts. Peanut butter is frequently used in diabetic, sodium-restricted, and cholesterol-restricted recipes. The super spread is low in cost and delivers more protein for the money than any other food.

First sold in 1890, peanut butter is still America's #1 sandwich spread. It's consumed daily by 40 million Americans, a remarkable 800 million pounds per year — double the amount 25 years ago. Ninety percent of all American homes have a jar in their pantry.

This collection of peanut butter and peanut recipes from our readers provides nutrition and taste in a nutshell.

RECIPE FOR A GOOD DAY

Take two parts unselfishness and part patience and work together. Add plenty of industry. Lighten with good spirits and sweater with kindness.

Put in smiles as thick as raisins in a plum pudding. Bake by the warmth which steams a loving heart. If this fails to make a good day, the fault is not with the recipe but with the cook.

Will Persian Gulf Survive World's Worst Oil Spill

JOY ASCHENBACH
National Geographic News Service

It's a Persian Gulf target that's being attacked with bombs, booms and oil-eating bacteria.

"This is a first in our lifetime -- a spill in a category by itself, in a war environment," says a U.S. expert assessing the aftermath of the largest oil spill ever recorded.

In January, Iraq deliberately released 300 million to 400 million gallons of oil from the Sea Island terminal, about 10 miles from Kuwait.

The volume is triple that of the previous world-record spill, the 1979 "Ixtoc I" well blowout in Mexico. It's more than 30 times the 11 million gallons dumped into Alaska's Prince William Sound in 1989.

Since Iraq torched hundreds of Kuwaiti oil facilities in late February, thick smoke, clouds and the ground war have obscured the gulf oil slick.

"No one is sure exactly how much oil is in the water," says Ibrahim Al-Muhanna of Saudi Arabia's Ministry of Petroleum in Riyadh. "Some has evaporated, some has sunk, some might have gone to the Iranian shore. The size of the slick changes all the time."

But he estimates that "more than 10 million barrels (420 million gallons) have gone into the sea."

Whether the Persian Gulf will fully recover, the experts say, depends on the magnitude of the spill in relation to one of Earth's most fragile ecosystems.

Its turquoise waters are shallow, relatively still and nearly landlocked, taking about five years to flush out pollutants. Wildlife flocks to the beaches and wetlands along its shores.

"It is likely to become the worst-ever man-induced, oil-related marine disaster," according to a report from the World Conservation Monitoring Center in London. But the center's experts say the effects might be reversed.

Dire predictions of devastating damage from past spills have often turned out to be overly pessimistic.

That this one stayed at sea for at least 10 days may lessen its impact, some scientists believe. Waves and wind may have evaporated much of its toxicity.

Oil at sea also degrades, emulsifies and oxidizes. What is left is less harmful tar balls, which may float, sink to the bottom or wash ashore.

Jacqueline Michel, a science adviser to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said that within three years most of the impact from the 68 million-gallon Amoco Cadiz disaster on the French coast in 1978 had disappeared.

"The story is much the same in all crude-oil spills," she explained after the 1989 Exxon Valdez accident in Alaska.

"On exposed rocky beaches with much wave action, little oil is left after a year. On quieter beaches the oil persists from two to three years and is frequently mixed with sand and buried. Salt marshes suffer the most damage. In general, fish and bird populations tend to be replaced."

The Persian Gulf recovered relatively unscarred from its previously worst spill. More than 80 million gallons of oil were released into its northern waters in 1983, when Iraq attacked Iran's Nowruz offshore platform during their eight-year war. Because of the war, the environmental damage was not adequately assessed.

Unlike pristine Prince William Sound, "the gulf is already possibly the most oil-polluted marine area in the world," according to the Conservation Monitoring Center. Wildlife survives because the region is largely undeveloped.

"The sheer magnitude of this spill is so huge that what happens after the major physical impact, the long-term effects, are difficult to predict," Usha Varanasi of NOAA tells National Geographic.

The Persian Gulf has more than 3,650 animal species. Kuwaiti islands, among them the recaptured Qaruh Island, have the world's northernmost coral reefs. Kuwaiti and Saudi Arabian island beaches are nesting areas for green and hawksbill turtles.

The seagrass pastures off Bahrain support 2,000 to 3,500 dugongs, or sea cows. The gulf is second to Australia in importance for the survival of dugongs, the creatures that inspired mariners of old to imagine mermaids.

The undersea pastures provide food or shelter for more than 500 species of plants and animals. Commercial fish, shrimp and pearl oysters feed there.

An estimated 1 million to 2 million birds winter in the gulf or stop there during migration. The gulf is the main breeding area for the threatened Socotra cormorant.

For some oil spills, a still-experimental process called bioremediation, in which bacteria eat oil, may be the best cleanup crew. One of the oil-eating techniques may be applied to gulf beaches.

In Alaska, heavily contaminated beaches were sprayed with a special fertilizer to stimulate bacterial growth. In only two to three weeks, the process began making a dramatic difference in the appearance of the rocks.

The type of chemicals used were certified to be safe for marine organisms, says Hap Pritchard of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Dying coral reef in the Persian Gulf is only one example of the destruction that may result from the world's worst oil spill. The 300 to 400 millions released in the gulf by Iraq endangers reefs, seagrass beds, and sea creatures.

An old Persian Gulf fisherman sets his net on a beach. Commercial fishing in parts of the gulf is threatened by Iraq's release of 300 million to 400 million gallons of oil into Kuwaiti waters in January.

Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas

Lancaster Extension Home Economist

A New Look At Food Safety

It has become an accepted part of common wisdom that consumer education is vital to reducing the incidence of foodborne illness.

Why? Because nearly 50 percent of foodborne illness results from consumer mishandling of food in the home. It is estimated there may be as many as 33 million cases of foodborne illness annually -- many mistakenly thought to be the flu.

Just in economic terms the costs are great -- between $3 billion and $8 billion in medical bills and loss of worker productivity each year.

Accordingly, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) has just published a new food safety brochure that focuses on those areas where consumer mishandling of food would most likely lead to foodborne illness.

A Quick Consumer Guide to Safe Food Handling is an outgrowth of a project in which FSIS brought together experts in microbiology, epidemiology, home economists, and consumer education to determine the most critical needs in food handling education.

Six main areas of consumer food handling were identified for inclusion in the publication. They are buying, storing, preparing, cooking and storing food and handling leftovers.

In each section consumers will find quick and easy tips to follow. These include proper sanitation, eliminating the opportunity for bacteria from raw foods to come in contact with cooked foods, thorough cooking of food to kill bacteria, and keeping perishable foods out of room temperatures to reduce any possible bacterial growth.

In addition to the safe food handling information, A Quick Consumer Guide also includes a chart showing how long you can keep perishable foods in the refrigerator and freezer and one indicating safe internal cooking temperatures for meat and poultry products.

Another question addressed is how to tell if an illness you have contracted is foodborne, and, if so, how to effectively report it to health officials.

While the publication is targeted to the general public, some people are more vulnerable than others to foodborne disease, generally because their immune systems are weakened. For them safe food handling information is critical. Those at-risk include pregnant women and young children, those over 60, and persons with weakened immune systems.

Both for the general public and for people at special risk, the brochure aims at prevention. To order single, free copies of A Quick Consumer Guide to Safe Food Handling, write the Consumer Information Center, 574-X, Pueblo, CO 81009.

Dairy Promotion Seminars Inform, Motivate

COLUMBUS, Oh. — Mid East United Dairy Industry Association, in cooperation with the Buckeye Dairy Boosters, is offering dairy promoters and princesses the opportunity to polish their skills and compile the information necessary to effectively plan and implement promotion activities. Five informative and motivating regional training seminars will equip promoters with the know-how to build and enhance their promotion efforts.

The following topics will be addressed at each seminar: "Practical Methods for Conducting a Cooking Demonstration," "Incorporating Nutrition and Care and Handling Issues Into a Cooking Demonstration;" "Publicizing and Promoting Through the Media;" "Motivating Yourself and Others to Promote Dairy Products;" "Utilizing Mid East UDIA's Resources to Complement Local Promotion Activities;" and "An Overview of Mid East UDIA's 1991 Advertising and Promotion Programs."

The Buckeye Dairy Boosters will conduct a brief business meeting and officer elections at the Ohio seminars. The election results will be announced at the April 18 meeting.

Mid East UDIA is coordinating a West Virginia seminar in cooperation with the West Virginia Beef Council and the West Virginia Department of Agriculture. Representatives from these organizations will present respective promotion messages.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

For years I've heard people say that in their retirement years they are busier than ever before. This often caused me to wonder at the truth of their statement. But, I'm afraid it is correct. Now there is more time to take advantage of opportunities — at least for the man. The woman still has all the responsibilities of the housework to attend to the same as in years past.

This past week was rather hectic as the calendar had some activity noted for each day. On Monday I helped in the sewing room of the Lancaster General Hospital by tearing sheet-sized pieces from hundreds of yards of heavy material. Tuesday I attended the board meeting of the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster.

On Wednesday my husband and I spent the day with a bus tour that visited "Three Little Baker's" dinner theater in Delaware. This was a pleasant interlude in a busy week. I was surprised at the size of the amphitheater that seated one thousand people around small tables. The smorgasboard was very nice and we enjoyed seeing the musical "Fiddler on the Roof" afterwards.

We went to the "Builders Show" at Park City Mall near Lancaster on Thursday. It seemed there were more companies selling windows than anything else. That evening the Cooperative Extension Service held their annual meeting. It was different in that various producer organizations were there and gave samples of their products such as honey, lamb, omelets, apples and sundaes.

During the weekend, we attended a travelogue on "Greece" at Lititz, a square dance at New Holland and then church on Sunday. The square dance had a covered dish meal preceding the dance and we made a mistake and arrived one-half an hour late. However, there were plenty of desserts left for us. I considered the week to be too, too busy.

New Milk Commercial Released

COLUMBUS, OH — Portraits of vibrant, healthy adults show the benefits of drinking milk, in the newest advertising campaign from Mid East United Dairy Industry Association, the dairy farmer-funded advertising and promotion organization serving Ohio, western Pennsylvania, and parts of West Virginia and northern Kentucky.

The new campaign, developed by the American Dairy Association, targets an older audience: the baby boomers. "We narrowed our focus from 18- to 49-year-olds to 25- to 49-year-olds so we could use a more adult message," says Mid East UDIA general manager Scott Higgins. "Our research shows that this group represents our greatest opportunity for increased milk consumption."

The new campaign is an extension of the 1990 "Everybody Knows" campaign, which emphasized the adult benefits of milk and challenged the perception that milk is for children. The latest commercials continue to feature the line, "Everybody Knows Milk's for Babies. Baby, Milk's for You," but the graphic visual style is a striking departure from other commercials. The creative filming techniques and the variety of distinctive musical renditions are used to quickly capture the viewer's attention.

The campaign's three 30-second commercials continue to challenge milk's image as a child's beverage. The spots show baby boomers nonchalantly posing for portraits to show the health benefits of drinking milk: strong bones, bright smiles and soft skin.

The new commercials began airing on local television stations February 19 and will continue to air throughout 1991.

The first "Everybody Knows" campaign was honored last year in several advertising industry competitions. The television spots won Telly and National Agri-Marketing Association Awards for Best Dairy Products and Best Producer-Funded campaigns, respectively. The commercials were also recognized by the Clios, the U.S. advertising industry's premier competition, and the campaign's music was specially commended by Mobius, Telly and the International Radio Festival of New York awards.

Pennsylvania Home Economics Teacher Of The Year Named

Mary Deitrich of Hempfield High School was named Pennsylvania Home Economics Teacher of the Year.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Some athletes take steroids to win sports competitions. Students at Hempfield High School take Sports Nutrition classes to top their opponents.

"I noticed a difference in the way I play since I eat differently before games," football player Ricard Nolley said.

Nolley said the nutrition classes taught him to increase carbohydrates for energy and cut out junk food.

Although the students who take the classes score more wins, it's the teacher who developed the nutrition curriculum that swept state competition to win the state title — Pennsylvania Home Economics Teacher of the Year.

Mary Deitrich, who has been teaching for almost 25 years, said teaching nutrition is her big love. About three years ago she realized the need to present accurate nutrition information to sports participants. She could not find curriculum for it so she researched the topic and wrote it herself.

"The students often have a lot of myths about what they should eat before a game. Football players often think they need to overdose on protein like eating steak and fried eggs before a game."

Deitrich teaches her students that heavy foods set in the stomach for three to four hours and drain one of energy.

Nolley said that he learned spagetti and salad is a good meal to eat before a game. He learned to stay away from fats in food like chips and candy, and, instead, snack on carrots, nuts, and apples.

Eleventh-grader Erica Gaul also took the class. She said, "I learned I shouldn't drink a lot of Gatorade and soft drinks because sugar isn't good for you. The blood sugar level goes high and makes you tired at the event."

Now, Gaul drinks mainly water before, throughout, and after track events.

"If you wait until you feel thirsty than you actually are beginning to dehydrate," she said. "You should drink water before you feel thirsty."

Forty students are enrolled in the sports nutrition classes this year. Dietrich is pleased that students want to perform to their maximum.

"Most kids who take this class do well in sports because they take nutrition seriously," she said.

"More than 300 electives are offered at Hempfield High School so we (home economics teachers) need to offer programs that interest kids." Dietrich said.

Deitrich takes her responsibilities seriously. She said she works every evening on updating her classes and takes college courses every summer. While some teachers complain about summer schooling, Deitrich doesn't. She said, "It's fun and it gets me out of the house."

As an enthusiastic teacher, Deitrich has good rapport with her students. She said that the greatest compliment she receives is when students tell her, "You know what I learned in class really works."

Deitrich believes she is doing more than teaching a class. "These students will take the information they have learned into the community and incorporate it into lifelong experiences by practicing good diet habits," she said.

Although Deitrich has also developed a Life Skills class, better known as bachelor survival, she could use only one phase of her work to apply for the award. The home economics department nominated Deitrich for the award to compete with teachers across the state. Now, Deitrich faces national competition.

The national competition will be at the annual American Home Economics Association held at Minneapolis in June.

Deitrich's nutrition program will be evaluated by a panel of judges on its pertinence, timeliness, innovation, creativity, impact on students' lives, stimulation of critical thinking, development and implementation of home economics concepts, and feedback from students, families, colleagues and administrators.

As far as Deitrich remembers, this is the first time a Lancaster County home economics teacher has won the state title.

She's eager to share her research and hopes other teachers will find the course stimulating.

Capacity and reliability for on-time harvesting

When it comes to harvesting valuable forages, you need capacity and reliability to get the crop off fast. New Holland forage harvesters give you on-time harvesting with built-in features to improve reliability, ease maintenance and lower operating costs.

Leader in its class

Put a Model 718 in corn or haylage and you'll see why it's the most popular medium-duty harvester in its class. This cut-and-throw designed harvester offers maximum efficiency. A heavy-duty 540-rpm PTO handles up to 90 horsepower. The 12-knife cutterhead delivers a fine uniform chop.

Powerful performance

The heavy-duty Model 790 gives you smooth and efficient harvesting, thanks to the 12 cutterhead knives set at a steeper rake angle and a two-speed blower. The heavy-duty driveline handles up to 150 horsepower.

Energy-saving efficiency

The Model 900 is designed to meet the needs of today's big crop producers. The 1,000-rpm driveline is rated at 190-PTO or 210-tractor horsepower. You get smooth feeding and controlled chopping because of a design that lets the feedrolls pivot up and toward the cutterhead as a unit for ideal length of cut.

Peace of mind protection

Optional Metalert® II, available on the "790" and "900," looks for trouble before it happens. You get a five-year guarantee against cutterhead damage caused by ferrous metal. More important, it keeps nasty bits of scrap metal out of livestock feed.

To get all the facts on New Holland forage harvesters, come see us about a demonstration on your farm.

At Smith's Implements, Work Is A Tie That Binds

BONNIE BRECHBILL
Franklin Co. Correspondent

MERCERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — A huge painting of an oak tree with two deer beneath it adorns the wall behind the counter at Smith's Implements, Inc. H. Virginia Smith, president of the company, chose the oak tree — "strong roots and growing upward" — as the logo for the business.

Her grandson, Robert Uccellini, painted the logo and the John Deere emblem on the wall.

"We're a family-run business of every sense of the word," Virginia said of her family's John Deere dealership near Mercersburg.

Founded in 1964 by George and Virginia Smith, the business was first housed on Faust Street. After a few months of operation, they moved the business to its current site along Route 16 west of Mercersburg. They had two employees at that time.

In 1971, the Smiths built a new building, which they have expanded several times over the years. They incorporated in 1973.

The business reorganized in 1987, with five family members becoming co-owners. Virginia is president, sons Brenton and Ross, vice-presidents; daughters-in-law Jody Rockwell Smith, treasurer, and Tamela Wible Smith, secretary. All work full-time in the dealership.

As president, Virginia pays bills, does the payroll and "holds the odds and ends together."

Brenton, 35, manages the parts and sales departments and the lawn and garden equipment division of the dealership. He started working part-time in the business at age 12.

His wife, Jody, does the parts and service inventory on the computer, prepares work orders, and submits warranties. "It's a case of whatever needs to be done," she said. She and Brenton were married for 6 years before Jody started working in the family business. "(Working together) has made our marriage stronger," she said. "I know what's going on, and we deal with things together." They have two boys, ages 14 and 10.

Ross, 31, is in charge of the farm machinery sales and service. He also negotiates with the John Deere company about equipment and service programs. "John Deere gears its sales programs to off-season purchasing by using bonuses to get the farmers to plan aheady," Ross explained.

The winter is "not as hectic as the summer time, but we're busy," he said. Farmers bring in their equipment and have it thoroughly gone over by shop personnel. "We make recommendations for the machinery's needs for repairs for the coming year. Farmers have accepted the program very well. They are better off spending time with their cows and letting us make their machinery repairs."

Ross's department sold 15 new forage harvesters in 1990. "It was unbelievable," he said.

Ross's wife, Tammy, does the bookkeeping and general secretarial work for the business. At the time of their marriage, Tammy worked in a law office. A vacancy in the Smith's office came up about a year after their marriage, and Virginia asked Tammy, "Do you think you can work for your mother-in-law?"

Tammy replied, "Yes, I think so!" Her husband trained her to do the bookkeeping, as it had previously been his responsibility.

Tammy and Ross's four-year-old daughter enjoys coming into the office while her mother catches up on paperwork on spring and summer evenings.

Virginia's daughter, Teresa Smith Uccellini, is not involved in the family business. However, her son, Robert, who painted the logo, works in the parts department when he's home from college. Another son, William, had worked in the business part-time after school. He is not stationed in Saudi Arabia.

A cousin, Terence Peck, works as Smoth's full-time.

Virginia's father-in-law, Brooks F. Smith, started his long-time association between the Smith family and the John Deere company by founding Fulton County's first John Deere dealership many years ago. Until his death in 1987, he lived across the road from Smith's Implements. Even when not able to be actively involved in the day-to-day running of the business, he would "look out the window and notice every truck that came in here," Virginia said.

The Smith family genuinely enjoys working together. "It has enhanced our family life," Virginia said. "We know and understand each others' lives more than if we only saw each other once a week. When one has a headache, we all know it."

While the Smiths spend most holidays together, they "don't visit each other in the evenings," Virginia said with a laugh.

Like the farm families they serve, they work together on a daily basis. And, also like the farmers, their business is affected by changes in the weather and farm prices.

"When the farm economy is good, ours is good," Virginia said. She keeps close watch on milk prices, the weather and the crops. After several years of poor crops, 1990 was a good crop year, she noted.

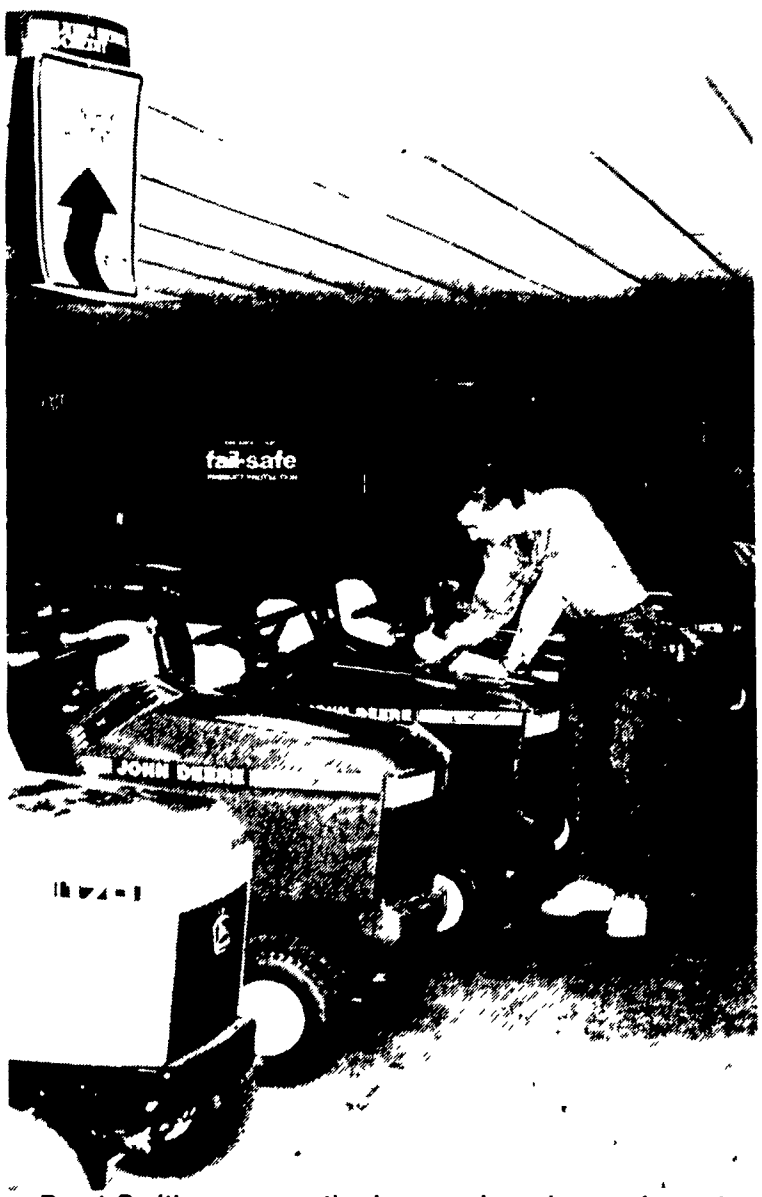
"Like farming, money is not always the compensation," she said. "We enjoy working with farmers. We become caught up in their lives. Over the years, they become friends."

The Smiths are close not only to their customers, but to their 10 non-family employees as well. Marvin Long is their farm machinery salesman; Dan Smith (no relation) is shop foreman. Their longest-term employee is Arthur Besore, 69, who was hired in November 1964. "Doc", as Besore is known to area farmers, goes out to the farmers' fields to fix hay harvesting equipment in the midst of harvest time. "He's our treasure," Virginia said.

In 1989, Smith's, Inc. was designated as a women's minority business in Maryland because the majority of its stockholders are women. The Smiths bid on state contracts for grounds maintenance equipment for state parks, and this designation gives them an advantage of such bids in Maryland.

Behind Virginia's desk hangs a sign that declares, "This company shall continue forever."

"That's our motto," she said.



Brent Smith manages the lawn and garden equipment portion of the dealership.

In the Hissong Family

Dad Teaches Sons To Work Together

BONNIE BRECHBILL
Franklin Co. Correspondent

MERCERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — It's not unusual for a farm to be owned by a father and son. Sometimes more than one son wants to come into the business, so a three-way partnership is formed. Or, two or three brothers will own and operate a farm.

But the Hissong family must hold some sort of a record for the number of family members involved in a farming operation in Franklin County, if not in the whole state.

Nine Hissongs — a father, four sons and four grandsons — form the corporation that owns and operates Hissong Farmstead in southern Franklin County.

Son Dennis, 42, explained the beginnings of the large partnership. "Dad brought us boys up to work together. When it came to the point where we had to decide what to do for a living, we didn't like the idea of going out on our own, so we stayed together and enlarged the farm."

His brother, Greg, 31, added, "Because we're Christian people, we're able to work better together. That's the foundation for us."

Another factor in the Hissongs' decision to continue working together was the economy, Dennis said. "It was getting harder for a husband and wife to go out and farm on their own."

The Hissongs farm 1,500 to 1,600 acres, 1,100 of which they own. They milk 360 cows, have another 80 dry cows, and 600 head of young stock. "We have a lot of machinery and cattle here," Dennis acknowledged, "but if it was divided out, it's not that much."

Cows are milked at 3:00 in the morning and 1:30 in the afternoon in two double-three parlors. Each milking takes about five and a half hours, but since they milk in shifts, each person milks for only a little over two hours.

"The milking schedule is the key to the operation," Dennis said. Everyone knows the schedule, and each person must find a replacement if he or she cannot milk at the appointed time. Having so many skilled milkers available gives each family vacation time that would be hard to come by in a single-family operation. Everyone has every other Sunday off. All members of the corporation — and many of their family members — milk except the father, Marvin.

Jere Hissong, Sr., the oldest son, is vice-president of the corporation and field man; Larry is secretary and assistant herdsman; Dennis handles machinery repair and is treasurer; Greg is the calf manager. Jere, Jr., the oldest grandson in the partnership is the herdsman. The other three grandsons fill in where needed with the cattle and the field operations.

Larry's wife, Arlene, is recording secretary for the corporation, and Dennis's wife, Evelyn, is the farm's bookkeeper. Both take their turns with milking chores.

Two grandsons who are in high school work part-time at the farm, as do four younger granddaughters.

"We each have our specialty," Dennis said. While no one is officially "The Boss," if there is a lot of hay to be harvested on a particular day, "we'll let one guy call the shots," he said.

Certain field jobs are headed by a particular individual; Dennis, for instance, runs the combine and corn planter because he is skilled at repairing them when breakdowns occur.

Marvin, 68, is president of the corporation, and supposedly works only part-time. He takes cattle to the auction, pumps out the manure pit, washes the bulk tank, and scrapes manure. In the summertime, he also mows the grass, runs the self-propelled forage harvester and shells corn. He has lived at Hissong Farmstead since he was two years old.

Marvin and his wife, Romaine, have six children; two, Marvin E. and Bea, are not involved in the farm business.

Romaine, according to Dennis, is "the backbone" of the operation. Officially, she cleans in the milking parlor and milk house and maintains the flowerbeds and garden. Her most important function, however, is being Mom.

"The house is always welcome for whoever comes in," she told a visitor. Sons and grandsons and others enter her kitchen regularly for coffee and snacks. "It makes me happy," she said.

Having her family close by and working together is "wonderful," she said. "I couldn't ask for anything better. I hope and pray it can continue."

The Hissongs employ no hired help, and plan to continue to use only family labor. "We'll cut down on the workload if the family can't keep up with it," said Greg.

The farm is well-known for its seven identical blue silos, which are lighted to resemble candy canes at Christmas time. Andy, the youngest full-time partner, is responsible for that project.

The silos are full of hay and corn silage and shelled corn.

The first one was built in 1971 and the last in 1981. "People asked why we stopped building them," Dennis said. "They knew we could use more of them. When we built them, there wasn't a better time in our lifetimes to build. But the economics aren't there to accommodate any more at the present time."

"In this business it takes a lot of planning ahead," Dennis continued, "maybe more so than in some other businesses, because we have very little say in what we receive for our product. We ride through the low times, and when we have good times, that's when we do our expanding."

"We like to look ahead," Greg added, "but there are a lot of 'ifs.'" He recently had an architect draw a ten-year plan for the farm that would enable them to milk 800 to 1,000 cows. They are breaking ground for a heifer barn for animals that are 8 weeks to 7 months old. "We're gearing for efficiency," Greg said.

A Slurrystore was added to the operation in the winter of 1983-84 because the Hissongs considered it a good investment in both the farm and the environment. The 1.3 million-gallon manure handling system allows them to spread manure when the ground can most readily accept it, eliminating the possibility of run-off.

"We're concerned with protecting the environment," Dennis said. "We don't care for the (manure) smells any more than the city person does. We could have saved ourselves money and let the stuff run, but that wouldn't be good for us or anybody else."

York Sets Dairy Princess Pageant For April 27

York County is searching for 1991 Dairy Princess candidates. Do you know any young women, between 16 and 24 years of age, interested in the dairy industry and communications?

A "Dairy Miss" will be chosen again this year. Dairy farmer or farm worker's daughters between six and eight years of age are eligible. The Dairy Miss will be invited to participate in parades and a few other promotions, but she has no specific responsibilities.

For more information about the Dairy Princess or Dairy Miss, contact Brenda Walker, R.D.#1, Box 287, New Freedom, PA 17349; phone (717) 235-2970.

This year's pageant for the Dairy Princess and Dairy Miss will be held at 8:00 p.m., April 27, at the 4-H Center. In celebration of 35 years of dairy promotion, dairy princesses from the past 35 years will be honored at the pageant.

The next meeting of the Dairy Princess and Promotion Committee will be held at 7:30 p.m., Monday, April 1, at the Extension Office. You are invited to join us.

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

Adding rice bran is a relatively new way to add goodness to many recipes, and microwave recipes are no exception.

Rice bran is the outer layer of the rice kernel. It's the part that is removed when rice is milled to become white rice. Added to food — from soup to dessert — rice bran adds extra vitamins (especially B vitamins), minerals (especially potassium, phosphorus and iron) and dietary fiber. Best of all, it adds a nutty, slightly sweet taste, and a chewy or crunchy texture. Rice bran ranges from medium to dark brown, which is one more reason why it's perfect to use in a microwave topping, as in Peach Blueberry Rice Dessert (below).

Another way to add extra vitamins, minerals and fiber to recipes is by using brown rice instead of white rice. The light, tan color of brown rice comes from the bran, which is left on. The only processing done to brown rice is to mechanically remove the outer hull.

Brown rice takes longer to cook, because of the higher fiber and oil content of the bran layer. I find that it's best cooked conventionally, according to package directions. I often cook it ahead and freeze it in measured amounts to use when cooked rice is called for in a recipe. It keeps its tender, yet firm, texture after a quick microwave defrost.

For microwaving, I've been using a relatively new, fast-cooking brown rice (similar to instant rice), which cooks almost as quickly as instant rice, but has more fiber. (The same brand of white rice is enriched, so it contains about the same amount of other nutrients). Package directions say to bring the water and fast-cooking brown rice to a boil on High (uncovered) and then microwave 5 minutes on Medium (50% power, 325-350 watts). I've found that the rice has most texture when, instead of microwaving on Medium, it stands covered for 8 to 10 minutes (or until water is absorbed).

Brown rice (including the fast-cooking kind) is easy to find in supermarkets. Rice bran is found in most health food stores and in some larger supermarkets, although I had to go to several health food stores before finding the unsweetened kind. (If you can't find an unsweetened kind, substitute wheat germ or oat or wheat bran). A sweetened variety, "Honey Crunch" flavor, comes in a jar similar to wheat germ and is found in most supermarkets by cereals. Store rice bran in your refrigerator.

Today's recipes come from the USA Rice Council's 14-page booklet, "Discover Rice Bran." The booklet highlights the nutritional value of rice bran and describes how it can be part of a low-cholesterol meal plan. It contains 10 recipes — including soup, vegetable, breads, main dishes and dessert. Some recipes include microwave directions. Each recipe is analyzed for nutrients. For your free copy of "Discover Rice Bran," send a self-addressed stamped business-size envelope to The USA Rice Council, Dept. R.B., P.O. Box 740121, Houston, Texas 77274.

Rice Mushroom Pilaf combines brown rice and rice bran with fresh vegetables to make a tasty side dish. The fresh vegetables, along with seasonings and oil, are cooked first until tender. The cooked rice and rice bran are stirred in and the whole mixture heated until warm. If you have leftovers or want to make this into a delicious main dish, stir in cooked chicken or meat along with the rice and rice bran.

Peach Blueberry Rice Dessert is a light, yet filling version of a fruit crisp which is packed full of nutrition. It's so good and so good for you that it also would be excellent for breakfast or a snack. Brown rice, peaches, blueberries and a little brown sugar are topped with a nutty-tasting, golden brown layer. Eight to 10 minutes is all the microwaving it takes to heat the ingredients and cook this wonderful dessert.

Rice Mushroom Pilaf

2 cups sliced fresh mushrooms
½ cup chopped green onion, including green tops
½ cup shredded carrot
¼ cup slivered almonds
¼ tsp. dried thyme leaves
⅛ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 tablespoon olive or vegetable oil
2 cups cooked brown rice (cook in beef broth)
¼ cup unsweetened rice bran

Stir together mushrooms, green onions, carrots and almonds in a microwavable 1 to 1½ -quart casserole; sprinkle with thyme and pepper and drizzle with oil. Cover with lid or waxed paper. Microwave (High) 2 to 3 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Stir in brown rice and rice bran. Re-cover and microwave (High) 1 to 2 minutes or until hot. Makes 4 servings.

HINT: If rice was cooked ahead and refrigerated, allow 3 to 5 minutes for final cooking time.

Peach And Blueberry Rice Dessert

2 cups cooked brown rice
1 16-oz. can sliced peaches in juice, drained and cut into small chunks
1 cup fresh blueberries*
2 tablespoons packed brown sugar
⅓ cup rice bran (unsweetened or sweetened)
¼ cup whole wheat flour
¼ cup chopped walnuts
¼ cup packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
3 tablespoons margarine

In a microwavable 1½ -quart shallow casserole (or 8x8 square or 9-inch round baking dish), stir together rice, peaches, blueberries and 2 tablespoons brown sugar; spread evenly in casserole or dish. Set aside.

Combine rice bran, flour, walnuts, ¼ cup brown sugar and cinnamon in mixing bowl. Cut in margarine with pastry blender until mixture resembles coarse meal. Sprinkle evenly over rice mixture. Microwave (High) 6 to 8 minutes or until hot. When done, margarine will be melted and top-

Cook's Question

ANSWER — Rose Ann Martin, Ephrata, would like a recipe to make a mix similar to Bisquick that can be used in recipes that call for a buttermilk baking mix. Thanks to Barb Gayman of Chambersburg for sending a recipe plus two more that will appear in the cooking with eggs article. She writes that these recipes and 650 others are available in a new cookbook that their school has just published. The cookbook may be purchased by sending $8 plus $2 for shipping to Shalom Christian Academy, 126 Social Island Road, Chambersburg, PA 17201 or call (717) 375-2223.

Homemade Bisquick

8 cups flour
1⅓ cups dry milk
5 tablespoons baking powder
1 tablespoon salt, optional
1 cup butter or shortening

Mix well and store. Can be used with any Bisquick recipe. Store in freezer and it's always fresh.

CORRECTION — The February 23 issue of this column had a recipe for apple fritters. The ingredients should have read 4-4½ pounds flour instead of cups. Here is the complete recipe from Janice Lehman, Myerstown.

Apple Fritters

4 cups apples, diced
1 cup raisins
3 cups warm water
3 tablespoons yeast
6 eggs, beaten
1¼ cups butter, melted
2½ cups dry instant mashed potatoes
1¼ cups sugar
2½ teaspoons salt
4-4½ pounds flour
3 teaspoons cinnamon

Cook raisins until soft; add spices and cook until slightly soft. Dissolve yeast in warm water. Add ¼ cup sugar with the yeast.

Add remaining ingredients (raisins and apples should be added before flour).

Let rise overnight.

Roll out dough. Cut into strips 1½ x3¼ -inches. Let rise again until double. Fry in deep oil in electric skillet. Glaze:

6 cups confectioners sugar
6 teaspoons vanilla
12-16 tablespoons hot water
8 tablespoons butter, melted
3 teaspoons cinnamon

Heat combined ingredients and dip apple fritters into the glaze.

Dairy Of Distinction Seeks Well-Kept Dairy Farms For 1991 Beautification Recognition Program

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

COVINGTON (Tioga Co.)—The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, Inc., is ready to receive applications for 1991. This program rewards clean, well-kept farmsteads to help with consumer acceptance of dairy products in the store.

State President Dan Baker, dairyman from Covington, Tioga County, said the program has received great acceptance in the past and officers look forward to a good response again this year. "There are plenty of good looking dairy farms out there that have not been judged," Baker said. "And even those who have entered the selection process in past years, should enter again."

The program provides rewards of recognition to producers who maintain attractive production sites. This recognition benefits the entire dairy industry, as well as individual dairymen. Not only does the favorable publicity generated by the program in the general press help bring modern farm practices to the attention of urban people, farmers use the distinction to promote their own operation or seek and hire farm labor.

Paul Nichols, the secretary for the Pennsylvania program, said applications may be sent in now to apply for the award. Deadline for applications is April 15, 1991. Judging takes place in the month of May and is based on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds and surroundings. The states are divided into districts and a local committee oversees the program in each district. A team of judges designated by the local committee visits each farm and uses a score sheet to rate each farm. In Pennsylvania, in addition to this team of judges, the sanitarian for the farm's cooperative or dealer-handler is asked to be part of the judging process.

"One of the things I always tell people is that even though they may not now have the most fancy place, they can work toward the principles of the Dairy of Distinction program," Nichols said. "By doing this, they work toward a goal that encourages consumers to use more dairy products."

Winners receive a colorful, 18x24-inch Dairy of Distinction sign to be placed at the entrance to the farmstead. In addition, as in past years, an 11x14-inch color portrait of the farm will be given by Lancaster Farming to each winning farm in the Pennsylvania program.

"As a dairy farmer, you work hard all year long, taking care of your farm," said Helen Fountain, program executive secretary. "In addition to managing your herd, there are lawns to mow, flowers to plant, and overall maintenance to keep farm buildings looking great. You deserve to be recognized for all the hard work, dedication and pride you put into your farmstead.

"It's time to apply for you and your farm to receive the coveted honor of Dairy of Distinction. This award is based on the concept that attractive farms enhance consumer confidence in the wholesomeness of milk, thereby stimulating milk sales and encouraging public support for the dairy industry."

Active dairy farms in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are eligible to apply for the award. Criteria for Dairy of Distinction awards include: clean and attractively finished buildings; neat landscaping, ditches, roads and lands; and well-maintained fences. Cleanliness of animals, barnyard, feed areas, as well as manure management, are also taken into consideration.

Applications are available from each state's program secretary or local cooperative extension. In New York, contact Evelyn Lightfoote, 3053 Depew Road, Stanley, N.Y. 14561. Phone: (716) 526-6654. In New Jersey, contact Angust Knispel, RD 1, Box 325, Pittstown, NJ 08867. Phone: 201) 735-4989. In Pennsylvania, contact Paul Nichols, American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, 1853 East Third St. Williamsport, PA 17701. Phone: (717) 323-2552.

Singing Brook Farms in Bedford County and owned by the Obie Snider family at Imler is an example of the farms that were designated Dairy of Distinction last year. Over the last four year, 363 farms in Pennsylvania have received the recognition.

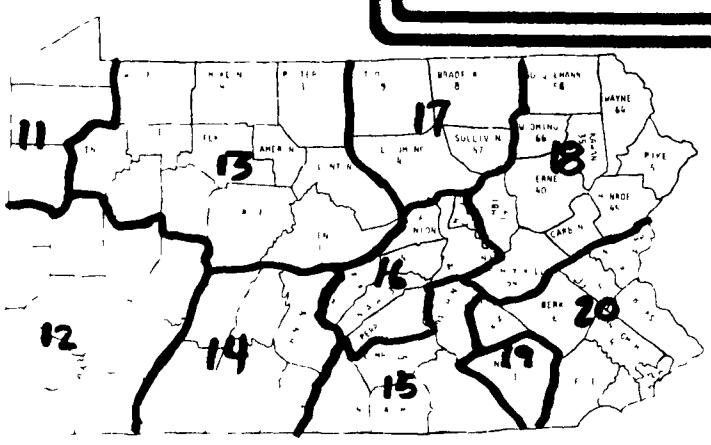
Dairy of Distinction
Dairy Farm Beautification Program



Pennsylvania Districts

Pennsylvania is divided into ten districts. Approximately 10 Dairy of Distinction awards will be made each year in each district. There is no cost to the applicant.

Pennsylvania area chairpersons are:

District 11: David Dowler; District 12: Wally Jackson; District 13: Susan DuJour; District 14: David Hileman; District 15; Sam McClay; District 16: Bernice Gable; District 17: Kevin Barrett; District 18; Allen Roszel; District 19: Lisa Risser: and District 20: Russell Rooks.

As a winner, you will receive a certificate and a nice metal sign to install at the end of your farm lane. In addition, LANCASTER FARMING will present a color farm portrait print to each of this year's winners in Pennsylvania. If your farm is a winner, be sure you or your district committee takes a color photograph of your farm and sends the negative and proof to LANCASTER FARMING in time for the awards ceremony.

YOUR INSPECTION INVITED

Yes, we invite you to carefully inspect Ripple, our "Chief Mark" daughter. She is selling at the Maryland Convention Sale on Saturday, March 9th at the Howard County Fairgrounds. She has the strength, size, and exceptionally good leg and foot of her dam.

Her dam is a VG daughter of Pabst with 19,300 milk and 706 fat, in a short 5 year old record. Ripple's second dam was a real milky Gay Ideal with records up to 23,720 milk and 930 fat. Her third dam was an Excellent daughter of Triune Complete, with records up to 21,250 milk and 921 fat.

Tie this "super good" pedigreed family to Walkway Chief Mark and all the things he does so well, and we have quite an exceptional heifer. As an added bonus she is due to Leadman shortly after the sale.

Come see her at the farm until March 6th, when she will be moved to the Fairground.

Offset 3-Pt. Mount Available With Post Drivers

LITCHFIELD, Ill.— An optional offset 3-pt. mount that fits Category I and II 3 point hitches is now available on Models HPDO-16 and HPDO-20 hydraulic post drivers from Worksaver, Inc.

The offset mount allows replacement posts to be driven along an existing fence line or along a ditch bank without backing into position and allows posts to be driven into corners where a center mounted unit cannot go.

The offset 3-pt. mount virtually eliminates the effects of tire bounce and slack in the tractor's 3-pt. hitch. The unit is free-standing when disconnected from the tractor.

The offset features two hitch points which allows a wagon to be towed while the post driver is attached, eliminating the need for a second vehicle to haul posts. One hitch point is centered to easily transport the wagon and the other is offset 32" to the right to allow additional working area.

Other features include a weight box with removable lid and an adjustable stabilizer that is adjacent to the driving ram. Driver is offset 50" to the left.

The post drivers drive steel and wood posts and railroad ties into the ground in seconds and handle all standard square or round post sizes. They are powered by the hydraulic system on a tractor and provide up to 40 strokes per minute, depending upon the tractor's hydraulic capability. The units may be operated by one person on hills or flat terrain.

For more information, contact Worksaver, Inc., P.O. Box 1000, South State Road, Litchfield, IL 62056, (217) 324-5973.

Wheat, Feed Grain Program To Start

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The 60 Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service offices across Pennsylvania will open sign-up for the 1991 Wheat and Feed Grain acreage reduction programs on March 4th. The sign-up period closes April 26th.

To qualify for price support loans and deficiency payments, state ASCS Executive Director Donald Unangst said producers must reduce their acreage bases by at least 15 percent for wheat, 7.5 percent for corn, barley and sorghum, and zero percent for oats.

At sign-up, farmers may request advance deficiency payments on their wheat and feed grains. According to Unangst, these payments will equal 40 percent of the estimated deficiency payment rate for the crops.

"Advance deficiency payments will be issued in cash," Unangst said.

Estimated deficiency payment rates are $1.47 per bushel for wheat, .58 cents for corn, .56 cents for sorghum, .47 cents for barley, and .15 cents for oats.

Unangst said there is no cross compliance. This means that farmers may elect to make acreage reduction cuts in one program crop to qualify for supports in that crop and pass up supports in another crop by planting the full crop base, or exceeding the base, in that program crop on the same farm.

The 1991 programs offer planting flexibility on up to 25 percent of the crop acreage base.

"Generally, this 'flex' acreage may be planted to any crop except fruits and vegetables," Unangst said. A list of prohibited crops will be available.

One major benefit to Pennsylvania farmers is that they will be able to plant crops based on expected market conditions.

"They will be less tied to government program requirements to maintain their historic base. Farmers will be able to assert themselves more as managers," said Unangst, a former dairy farmer from Mercer County.

The programs do not contain paid land diversion provisions. However, the 0/92 and 50/92 planting options are available. Under these provisions, wheat and feed grain farmers may devote all or a portion of their maximum payment acres to conservation uses, and get guaranteed deficiency payments on 92 percent of these acres, minus the actual acres planted to wheat or feed grains.

For additional 1991 farm program details, farmers should contact the local ASCS office in their own county.

Rezoned To Ag, Farm Sells For $545,000

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — A farm which was purchased four years ago by High Associates, Lancaster (when the site was zoned industrial) for $820,000 was recently rezoned to agriculture and sold at a public auction for $545,000.

The farm, sold to Levy S. King, was auctioned last week by J. Omar Landis Auction Service.

In 1990, Manheim Township changed the zoning from industrial to agriculture. King, who purchased the farm, lives nearby.

"We thought the price for agricultural purposes was very good," said Jay M. Witman, partner in the auction service.

Club Will Hold Contest

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Penn State Dairy Science Club will be holding its annual spring judging contest on Saturday, March 23, 1991, 10 a.m. at the Penn State Ag Arena. This event is open to all 4-H and FFA members.

The contest consists of five divisions: Senior 4-H, Junior 4-H, FFA, Collegiate Amateur, and Collegiate Professional. Following lunch at the Ag Arena, there will be a workshop on judging and oral reasons for the Junior 4-H contestants and coaches. However, some requests have been made for the Junior 4-H'ers to give reasons in the contest. Therefore, Junior 4-H division contestants will have the option to give one set of oral reasons or attend the workshops. They cannot participate in both activities. Their reasons scores will not count in calculating high individuals and teams in this division. However, the three highest scoring individuals in the junior reasons will be awarded. Junior 4-H contestants giving reasons must be pre-entered and designated on the entry form.

Each county 4-H team and FFA chapter will be allowed a maximum of eight contestants. Junior 4-H'ers must be born on or after January 1, 1977. Any 4-H member that has not judged in the national contest can judge in the Senior 4-H division. Likewise, any FFA member who has not competed in the national FFA contest is eligible to compete.

Entry fees are $4 per contestant plus $4 per coach attending the contest if paid in advance. This fee covers the costs of lunch and helps cover the costs of mailing the results. Entry forms are due Monday, March 11, 1991. Forms should include the division, team members' names, coach's name, Juniors giving reasons, return address, and phone number. Please mail the information along with the entry fee (check made payable to Penn State Dairy Science Club) to Robert Davis, 337 Henning Building, University Park, PA 16802, or call (814) 863-4205 for more information. Registration will also be held the day of the contest at 9 a.m. at the Ag Arena. However, late entry fees are $5 per contestant and coach.

The dairy judging contest is part of the annual Dairy Exposition. The Exposition, in its 66th year, is a dairy cattle fitting and showmanship contest between Penn State students, and will be held on April 27, 1991.

At lunchtime that day, special events such as a calf dressing contest and milking contest will be held. Following the exposition is the annual awards banquet. The awards for the judging contest will be presented at the banquet. For ticket information, contact Dale Olver at the above address or phone number.

Also this year there will be a Dairy Youth Management Workshop held prior to the judging contest on March 22 and 23 at Penn State. This is open to high school students throughout the state. For more information, contact Dale Olver.

More Acres In Md. Protected From Development

WASHINGTON, D.C. — More than 300 acres of prime farm and forest land just 45 minutes outside of Washington have been permanently protected from development as a result of a joint effort by the state of Maryland and the American Farmland Trust (AFT), a national farmland conservation group.

The landmark project involves the scenic 339-acre "Seligson-Gum Farm" at the foot of Sugarloaf Mountain on the Montgomery-Frederick County border. The American Farmland Trust purchased the property in mid-1990 for $2.4 million, when rising development pressure encouraged the owner to put the farm up for sale.

In November, AFT completed negotiations to resell about a third of the farm to the state of Maryland for parkland and the remainder to the two farmers who lease the land. AFT has placed restrictions on the land to keep it open for future agricultural use.

"Each week Maryland loses more precious farmland to the bulldozer," AFT President Ralph Grossi said. "This project is a perfect example of how public-private cooperation can halt this process and protect our fertile soil and open space."

Under the agreement, farmers Robert Raver and David Weitzer purchased 208 acres of the property's cropland for $600,000. This land has exceptionally good soils and is located in Montgomery County's Agricultural Reserve. Both farmers have practiced excellent land stewardship for more than 20 years; Raver is credited with introducing "no-till" conservation planting to Maryland and was recently named "Man of the Year" by the Maryland Grain Producers.

To ensure that the land is permanently restricted to agricultural use, AFT required that the farmers sell the development rights on their property to the Maryland Agricultural Land Preservation Foundation (MALPF).

"It's a dream come true for me, and AFT made it all work," said Raver, who has lived on the farm for more than two decades.

The 131 acres of woodland, which lie in the Frederick County section of the property, are home to a wide variety of wildlife. The woodland is adjacent to both the Sugarloaf Mountain public recreation area and the state-owned Monocacy Natural Resources Area, which abuts the C&O Canal Towpath National Historic Park. This parcel was purchased from AFT for $1.2 million by the Maryland Department of Natural Resources (DNR) as part of its "Program Open Space."

"This strategic acquisition will allow the state of Maryland to complete a greenway that will eventually enable the public to hike from the top of the Washington Monument to the summit of Sugarloaf," said DNR Secretary Torrey C. Brown.

The property, which could have been carved into 23 house lots under current zoning, will also serve as a buffer to an adjacent 1,800 acres of farmland preserved under a Maryland Environmental Trust conservation easement.

"Much of this project's success came from the teamwork between agricultural and conservation interests," Grossi said. "If we had not worked together, both the greenway and agricultural land would have been lost. In the case of this conservation protection project, the whole is even greater than the sum of its parts."

Grossi noted that in 1989 the Maryland legislature passed a mandate encouraging cooperation between state agencies in protecting land. The joint efforts of the DNR and the MALPF in the Seligson-Gum Farm project offer an outstanding example of how this can be accomplished, said Grossi.

Montgomery County also played a key role by lending AFT the remaining $600,000 needed to complete the purchase transaction. The county will be repaid when AFT and the farmers complete the sale of the Seligson-Gum Farm's development rights.

"It is clear that those concerned with protecting farmland and others concerned with open space stand on common ground." Grossi said. "We hope that farmers, public officials, and all those who love the outdoors will look at this conservation project and understand that by acting together, we have a better chance to preserve agriculture, recreation opportunities and open space."

Watching new paper roll up. The Warren and Youngsville 4-H Wildlife and Forestry Clubs recently traveled to Hammermill Paper Mill (owned by International Paper Company) in Erie to learn firsthand how paper is manufactured. According to Sanford Smith, Warren County extension agent, 4-H Volunteer Leaders Chris Wolbert of Youngsville and David Miller of Warren coordinated the educational trip for the 47 4-H'ers and parents. Also participating in the tour was County Commissioner Pat Evans. After reviewing the process of making wood pulp in the corporate meeting room, the group toured the papermaking, paper cutting, and paper storage facilities at the mill. The group then traveled to Erie Zoo for a presentation on endangered species protection. Warren County 4-H is open to all youth ages 8-19. For more information, contact Smith at (814) 723-6003.

Dairy 4-H Club

The reproductive tract of a pregnant cow was the topic of Dr. Eugene Hoefert's talk to the Cumberland County Dairy 4-H Club recently in Carlisle.

A hands-on demonstration allowed members to touch the various parts of the reproductive tract and identify them. Hoefert explained the functions of each of the parts. He practices at the Northside Veterinary Clinic, Carlisle, Pa.

Judging the "Hoard's Dairyman" contest was another activity of the club's meeting. Each member gave placings for the classes.

Election of officers for the coming year also took place. Elected were President Chris Young, Vice President Matt Day, Recording Secretary Megan Souder, Corresponding Secretary Health Ocker, Treasurer Mandy Naugle, News Reporter David Day, and social chairmen Kendra Naugle and Becky Cornman. Matthew Day and Craig Walton were elected county council representatives.

The next meeting will be the annual dairy banquet, March 11 at the Huntsdale Fire Hall.

That's Why Farmers Need Fertilizer.

Some folks will try to tell you that our rivers, streams and groundwater would be cleaner if farmers did not use fertilizer. The fact is that the best way for farmers to continue to feed the world while keeping our water clean is to use fertilizer. That's because fertilizer is the most manageable plant food source available to farmers. Alternative nutrient sources like animal wastes do not have the advantages of fertilizer, such as giving farmers the ability to place it precisely in the soil at just the right time in a plant's development and in the exact amount needed by the plant. Fertilizer is the environmental nutrient source.

The fertilizer industry is creating new products and working with farmers on new methods that will result in fertilizer use that protects the environment So let's not force farmers to reduce fertilizer use. Let's help them use it more efficiently—for the sake of the environment.

This message is brought to you by The Fertilizer Institute.

BINKLEY & HURST BROS. INC.

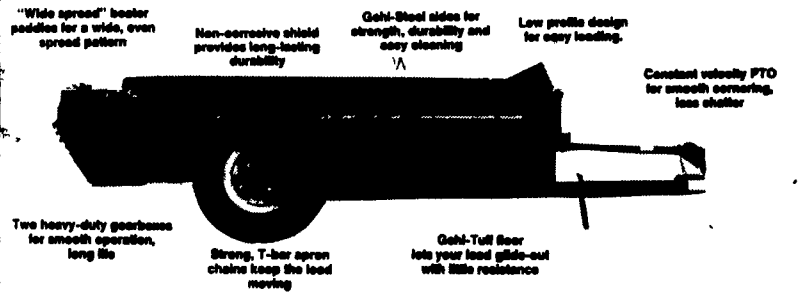
Proven Performance Features And Economical Price Makes Gehl Your Box Spreader Choice



"Wide spread" beater paddles for a wide, even spread pattern
Non-corrosive shield provides long-lasting durability
Gehl-Steel sides for strength, durability and easy cleaning
Low profile design for easy loading.
Constant velocity PTO for smooth cornering, less shutter
Two heavy-duty gearboxes for smooth operation, long life
Strong, T-bar apron chains keep the load moving
Gehl-Tuff floor lets your load glide-out with little resistance.

GEHL - The New Leader In Box Spreaders

More Value For Your Dollar!

Heavy-duty gear boxes
Two heavy-duty gear boxes, one a 90 degree beater drive, the other a two-speed worm box with bronze gear and steel worm, provide efficient power transmission, smoother operation and long life

Gehl-Tuff floor
In cold weather, the slick Gehl-Tuff surface reduces the force needed to break a frozen apron loose from the floor. So your whole load glides out with little resistance. And less apron pull means less wear and tear on drives and apron chains.

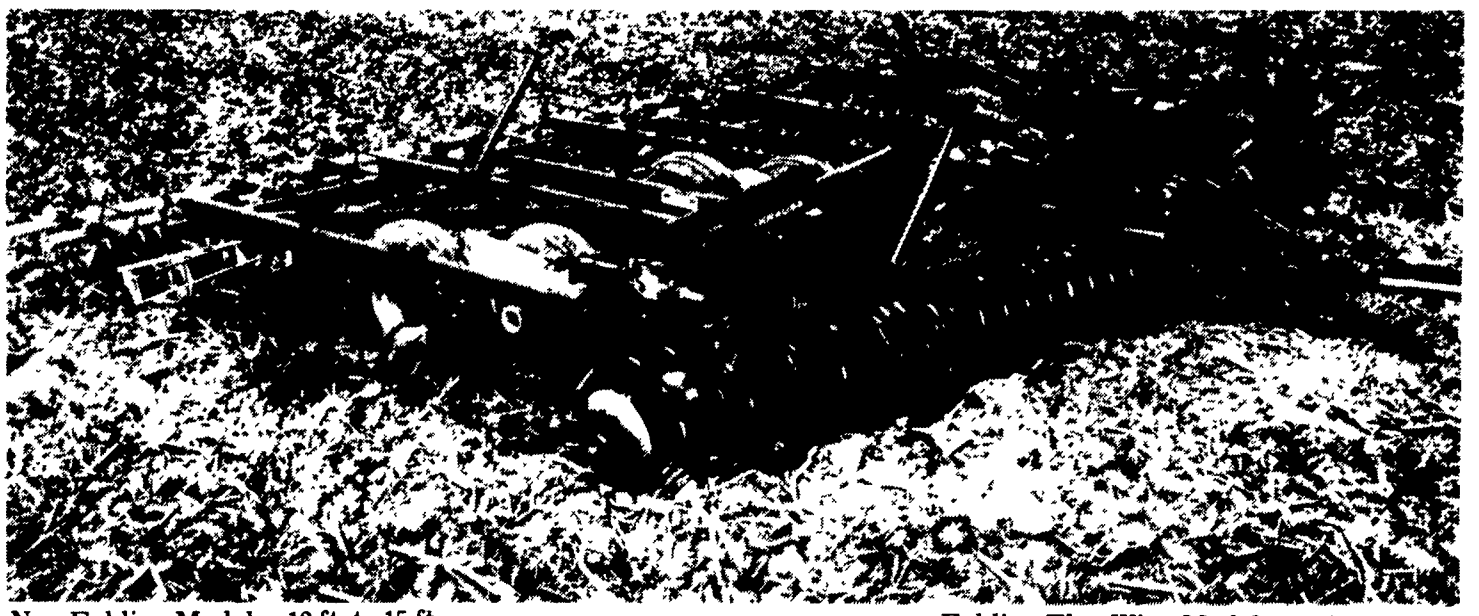
THE LANDSMAN

by Krause

An Implement That Can Cut Time And Labor Costs By 50%



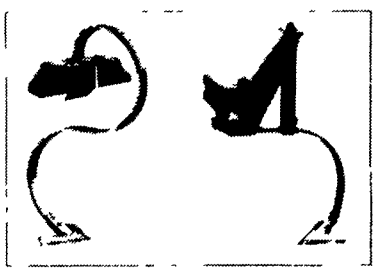
Non-Folding Models - 12 ft. to 15 ft.

Folding Flex Wing Models - 18 ft. to 36 ft.

Preparing a seedbed used to take a lot of time, a lot of fuel, and a lot of money.

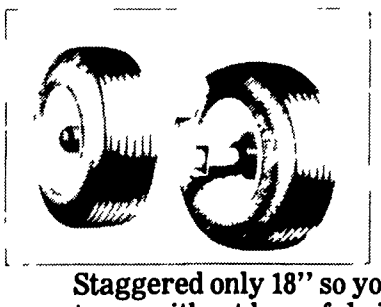
But now there's a smarter way to get the job done — with a Krause Landsman. It's a unique tillage implement that discs, incorporates chemicals (either deep or shallow), cultivates, and finishes all at once — to prepare your seedbeds with just one pass.

Built with heavy-duty features like these:



Choice of two cultivator shanks, both offering 25" of clearance under frame... Spring-cushioned shanks have rear-mounted shock and come with 10" sweeps. Heavy-duty "K-Tine™" shanks feature a high point load to keep sweeps level and still provide aggressive mixing action.

Massive hitch is an extra-heavy design, proven on Krause disc harrows. It is spring-cushioned to reduce frame stress on uneven ground — a feature most competitors don't offer. Built from heavy 4"x6" steel tubing.



Walking tandem wheels flex over obstacles individually and follow contour of the land for uniform working depth. Staggered only 18" so you can make tight turns without harmful side loading. Regreaseable bearings.

The 7700 Series Row Crop Cultivators Are Designed For You.

The WIL-RICH 7700 Series offers you a row crop cultivator for almost any job. The 7710 is a Danish tine unit designed for high speed work in most soil conditions and 7720 C-shank models give you extra muscle for hard packed ground. Step up to the 7750 Series. It's designed to handle a wide variety of row crop cultivating jobs — from ridge-till corn to conventional tilled beans.

Rigid models are available in 4- 6-, and 8-row units. Flatfold models come as either 8-, 12- or 16-row units.

7720 models use the patented WIL-RICH shank assembly to dig out weeds and condition the soil.

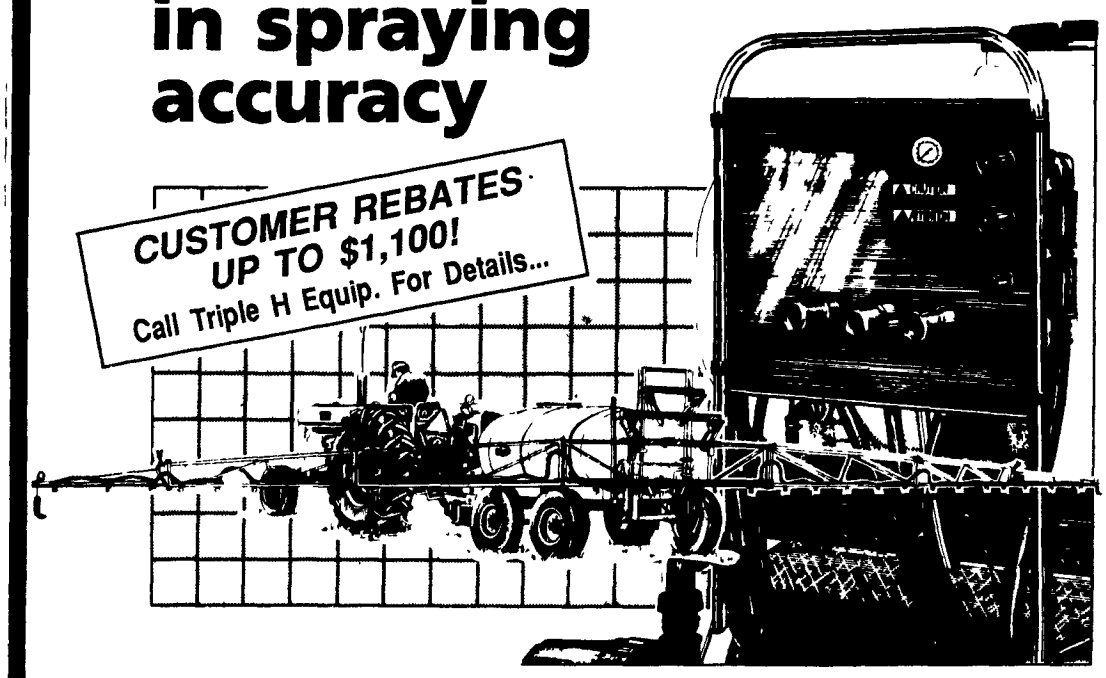
Breakthrough in spraying accuracy



Wasting chemical and yield on hills and headlands is a thing of the past with Vicon's new flow proportioning and boom compensation system. Application rate remains constant even when ground speed varies or individual boom sections are shut off. That means better coverage with lower input costs.

It is available on all Vicon trailer sprayers with tank capacities up to 785 U.S. gal. (3000 litres) and automatic stabilizing booms from 28' to 62'. There's also a choice of hydraulic or manual folding booms and a range of accessories that make crop spraying less of a chore.

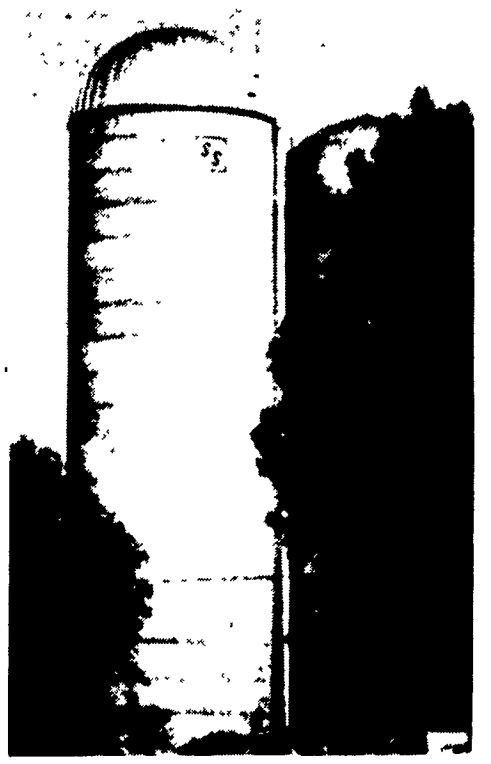
3 SILOS AND UNLOADERS



When planning your forage programs this year, remember that your main objective is to "store the plant and remove it from storage in as good condition as possible." THE UPRIGHT SILO HAS NEVER BEEN EQUALLED IN ITS ABILITY TO DO THIS!!

As herds become larger and labor is becoming more costly and scarce. there is more need to cut time requirements for all parts of the operation. The silo, or a combination of silos can be a key in reducing time spent harvesting, storing, and feeding your herd. "A properly managed upright silo is one of the best investments that a dairy farmer can make." Your best choice is a POURED CONCRETE SOLLENBERGER SILO...

PLY-FOIL is a very efficient form of insulation. In application after application it has proven to be extremely effective at controlling heat gain/loss, thus significantly reducing heating and cooling costs. PLY-FOIL Insulation uses an aluminum foil to reflect up to 97% of the radiant heat.

PLY-FOIL BENEFITS

PLY-FOIL products are clean, lightweight, and non-toxic; are unaffected by changes in humidity; do not shrink; and once installed require no maintenance. They do not promote the growth of fungi or bacteria, and provide no nesting support for rodent or insect pests. PLY-FOIL, which has a Class A/Class 1 fire rating, meets the fire and smoke safety requirements of most federal, state and local building codes.

CHECKOFF HELPS FUND PORK PROMOTION

Dr. Richard Barczewski
Extension County Ag Agent
University of Delaware

Whether you agree with it or not, many of the agricultural commodity groups have instituted a checkoff program through which they fund promotion, consumer education, and research projects.

Some groups are involved in the animal industry, while others have interest in grain or oil seed crops or even fruits and vegetables. What are checkoff programs for?

In the last few years, a few products have suffered because of misinformation or isolated detrimental circumstances involving them. When consumers reacted to these incidents by not buying these products, producers were often devastated financially.

Sometimes celebrities contribute to this problem by rallying a cause. By virtue of their high visibility and popularity, they manage to achieve credibility about an issue whether or not their position is based in fact.

The media and celebrities together can make for a disastrous combination for the group or practice being criticized. Add to this combination a liberal dose of inaccurate information and a sprinkling of half-truths, and the result can spell problems for producers and their products.

Government agencies which ensure the safety of our food products are viable and effective. However, food safety is not the only issue. Improving the image of a product in the consumer's eyes is important also.

For instance, can you remember when the ideal market hog was considerably fatter than it is now? Take a walk through today's supermarket. Where are the pork chops with more than ½ inch of exterior fat surrounding the loin-eye? It wasn't that long ago. But hog producers have risen to the challenge of meeting consumers' changing desires. It's time to shout this news far and wide.

As the pork industry shifts from a market that relied heavily on visual criteria to one that now measures backfat and muscle mass, producers are rewarded for growing a product consumers demand -- lean pork. Unfortunately, negative reaction in recent years to the high fat content of pork may still be influencing some consumers to choose other meats.

Consumers who drifted away from eating pork must now be educated about what this industry has done to meet the public's dietary preferences for a lower-fat product. The lamb industry is waging a similar battle against the false perception held by many World War II veterans that mutton is a less-than-desirable product. Then there are the people who resist eating meat altogether and encourage others to avoid it as well.

It's not easy being a consumer these days. Everybody has a story to tell and a position to communicate. What the industry must do -- and, I might add, has been doing -- is to speak on its own behalf with truthful, documented information.

Of course, pork contains fat and cholesterol. It's a fact. But we must continue to list the actual levels of fat and cholesterol in pork and show how well our products fit into the suggested dietary guidelines set by the American Heart Association. And let's spread the news that meat, whether it's pork, beef, chicken, turkey, lamb or veal, has a indispensable place in a healthy diet.

Checkoff dollars help provide information to key people and groups who guide the dietary habits of the nation. Educating dieticians, the medical community, teachers, and the public has a positive effect on our industry -- not through sensationalism and emotionalism, but through level-headed action, plain talk, and accurate information.

An effort is under way to raise the checkoff amount on swine from .0025 to .0035 percent. This means that for every $100 worth of hogs you sell, your checkoff amount will rise from 25 cents to 35 cents.

At a recent meeting of the Delaware Pork Producers Association, the majority in attendance favored raising the checkoff amount. Now individual producers must make this decision for themselves and then notify the appropriate people in their associations.

This issue affects every hog producer, big or small. Take time to express your views.

EPA Approves Ridomil For Alfalfa

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Growers now can protect valuable emerging alfalfa stands from damaging seedling disease.

Ridomil®, a soil-applied fungicide that controls damping-off caused by Pythium spp. and root rots caused by Phytophthora spp., recently was approved by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) for use on alfalfa.

The liquid fungicide, manufactured by Ciba-Geigy, has been used to control similar seedling diseases in soybeans, cotton, and various vegetable crops — more than 100 crops — for the past five years.

Don Elliott, senior product manager, fungicides for Ciba-Geigy said the company has researched Ridomil's effectiveness on alfalfa for the last eight years. Ciba-Geigy and university research proves the fungicide protects alfalfa stands from seedling diseases.

Dr. Landon Rhodes, Ohio State University, Columbus, has worked with the fungicide for several years. The results of his tests are promising.

"Many alfalfa growers settle for less stand and vigor than what's possible," said Rhodes. "We've seen definite increases in both stand and plant vigor from broadcast applications of the fungicide."

In the past, resistance and seed dressings have been the only protection alfalfa growers had against these diseases. And while resistance protects the plants from disease later in the season, Rhodes cautions growers from putting too much stock on resistance for seedling protection.

"Many varieties are resistant to Pythium and Phytophthora, but this resistance is more evident in older plants than in seedlings," he said. "A fungicide like Ridomil protects alfalfa from germination through the first six to 10 weeks of growth, when seedlings are most susceptible."

Seed dressings protect germinating seeds through emergence, but don't provide the protection needed from emergence until resistance has fully developed.

Many factors affect disease occurrence. For instance, cool and wet conditions favor the development of Phythium, while Phytophthora is more likely to occur when it's warm and wet. Soil type, cultivation practices, and crop history also affect disease development.

Both Elliott and Rhodes stress the importance of overall good management practices. "Ridomil will protect newly seeded alfalfa from seedling diseases, but it won't replace sound management practices," said Elliott. "Proper fertility, seedbed preparation, and other management techniques are still needed."

Brothersvalley FFA Holds Banquet

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.)— It was a night of good food, good company, and the presentation of many awards when the Brothersvalley 40-member FFA Chapter held its 52nd annual banquet at the town community center.

Some 215 persons attended the family style roast beef dinner. It was conducted by toastmaster and chapter president, Cory Smith.

Highlighting the evening's enjoyment was the induction of the Reverend Ralph Mills of Berlin into the chapter as the 36th honorary member. Now retired, Mills, for 34 years, was the pastor of the Berlin Brethren Church. It was noted that during those years his church was always open to the FFA for its activities.

Chapter pins and certificates were presented to 17 members. Chapter Farmer pins and certificates went to Jay Felgar, Matt Foor, Jeremy Hay, William Hersch, Matthew Johnston, and Matthew Welch.

Keystone Farmer degrees were bestowed on Mark Keefer, Robert Merkel, and Cory Smith. American Farmer pins went to Erik Hickle and Scott Landis.

Checks were presented to 15 winners of the county Agricultural Record Book contest. Four gold medals were earned in the state Agricultural Record Book contest, followed by seven silver and three bronze medals.

Three state pins were given to the high achievers during the state FFA Activities held at Penn State.

A demonstration titled "Cheese, A Natural Treat," won a state gold medal for the team of Bill Hersch, Eric Landis, Michael Cooney, and Steve Landis. As part of the evening's entertainment, the team did the demonstration for the dinner guests.

Brothersvalley's Keith Hay is Pennsylvania state president of the FFA. Hay gave the main address of the evening. It was preceded by remarks from Berlin Brothersvalley school superintendent, John Smrek; Larry Redding, state FFA advisor, and Wendy Will, the Pennsylvania State Fair Queen.

State president Hay lauded chapter advisor Doyle Paul as a "truly fine role model." He noted that Paul is also a Sunday School teacher, volunteer fireman, and a member of the FFA state board.

ARE INSTANT BROILERS IN OUR FUTURE?

Milton Madison
Assistant Professor of Agricultural Economics

Many factors have been responsible for the 18-fold increase in young chicken consumption since 1945 (from 4 pounds to 73 pounds per person on a ready-to-cook weight basis).

Changing tastes and preferences of consumers, marketing efforts of poultry firms, and brand advertising have all been factors. Perhaps the biggest factor was that broiler production costs have increased much more slowly than the inflation rate.

One reason for the increase in efficiency in producing young chickens has been the decrease in time it takes to grow a chick from a hatchling to a 4- or 5-pound bird. Over the last 40 years, the growth time has dropped from 3 months to 6 weeks.

Two weeks of that decrease came in the 1980s. If the decline in growth time were to continue at this pace, instant broilers would be available in 30 years. Upon hatching, chicks would be fed, watered, and grow to weigh 5 pounds by the end of the day! Perhaps that is carrying things a little too far.

There has been concern recently that the improvements in production efficiency for chicken may have come to an end. Research by Richard P. Stillman and Mark R. Weimar of the Economic Research Service in the United States Department of Agriculture indicates that production costs have been increasing at the same rate as inflation since 1986. Their article, "Impact of Different Cost Assumptions on Long Term Projections for the Broiler Industry," appeared in the November 1990 issue of "Livestock and Poultry Situation and Outlook Report."

By 1986, production costs adjusted for inflation had decreased to half the level that they were in 1967. Retail prices for chicken adjusted for inflation decreased from $1.42 per pound in 1960 to $.69 per pound in 1990.

The consumer has benefited much from past reductions in inflation-adjusted chicken production costs. Stillman and Weimar's research examines what will happen to the broiler industry if inflation-adjusted production costs continue to decrease at the 1967 to 1986 rate, remain constant, or reverse themselves and start increasing. If production costs resume their 1967 to 1986 rate of decline, relative to inflation, by the year 2000, people will eat about 2.2 pounds more chicken and pay 4 cents per pound less than if costs increase at the same rate as inflation. Net returns for all broiler producers would be $400 million higher if costs resume their decline.

Effects on consumption of beef, pork, and turkey are all less than 1 pound per person. However, broiler cost declines lead to 20, 8, and 1 cent(s) per pound lower prices for fed steers, hogs, and turkeys, respectively. The opposite results hold if costs increase and lower chicken consumption, higher prices for all meats, and lower returns to chicken producers are the result.

New ways of lowering chicken production costs need to be found if chicken is to increase in popularity. Processing and marketing efficiency will have to be improved — unless the instant broiler can be developed.

USDA Seeks Comments On Biotech Research

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture is seeking public comments on its proposed guidelines for research involving the planned introduction into the environment of genetically modified organisms.

The proposed guidelines, published today in the Federal Register, provide a step-by-step process for assessing the safety of field research with specific genetically modified organisms. They also offer recommendations for the design of appropriate confinement measures to control the survival and spread of such organisms during field research.

Dr. Charles E. Hess, assistant secretary of agriculture for science and education, said the guidelines are a major step forward for biotechnology research. "They provide scientific guidance to the research community while helping to assure the public that this technology is used in a safe, responsible manner," he said.

Hess also said continued research in agricultural biotechnology in the United States is important to the development of cheaper, safer, more nutritious, and more environmentally sensitive food and fiber products for U.S. consumers.

Dr. Alvin Young, director of USDA's Office of Agricultural Biotechnology, said the guidelines, although not mandatory, complement USDA's existing body of regulations and strengthen USDA's efforts to ensure that state-of-the-art agricultural research moves forward in a safe and timely manner.

"The guidelines will also help researchers as they work with the biosafety committees of their affiliated institutions to design safe field trials," Young said.

The guidelines, entitled "Proposed USDA Guidelines for Research Involving the Planned Introduction into the Environment of Organisms with Deliberately Modified Hereditary Traits," were written by the OAB with primary scientific input from USDA's Agricultural Biotechnology Research Advisory Committee.

The scientific community and public at large may comment on the proposed guidelines during a 60-day comment period which closes on April 2. Written comments should be sent to Dr. Daniel Jones, Office of Agricultural Biotechnology, Room 324-A, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250-2200. Copies of the guidelines may be obtained from OAB at the same address, or by calling (202) 447-9165.

MILK CHECK

THOMAS JURCHAK
Dairy Specialist
Lackawanna County

Here's a picture of the ups and downs in milk prices over the last three years that you will want to hang in the milk house as a reminder because it may never happen again.

Not that you won't see some of the same prices in the future (they're already back to the lows) but you won't see such gigantic swings in such a short time.

The three situations that combined to produce this picture have only a million to one chance of happening together again. A drought in the upper midwest; a worldwide shortage of milk powder and the Commodity Credit Corporation caught with an empty cupboard. These are the things that dairymen's dreams are made of.

When you look at the picture it's not hard to tell that the line that swings up and down from the top to the bottom is the milk price represented by the Minnesota-Wisconsin Price Series. The nearly flat line at the bottom is the support price for manufacturing grade milk.

The Cycle Starts

Starting on the left in the spring of 1988 you'll see that the M-W at $10.33 was sitting right on the support price of $10.33 from March to June. Then, responding to the usual increase in the fall, the M-W increased $1.94 to its first peak of $12.27 in December, only 45 cents below the record high of $12.72 set back in November 1984 during the diversion program.

Then again with the coming of spring in 1989 it fell to $10.98 in March and the support price was increased to $10.83 for three months to hold it up. Then the full impact of those three situations mentioned earlier plus some help from cheese buyers combined for an increase of $3.95 to put the M-W into orbit with a record high of $14.93 in December 1989.

That's when butter, powder and cheese prices got so far out of wack that no one knew what to expect next and the M-W plummeted $2.91 to a low of $12.02 in March 1990. The product price confusion continued but this time processors were concerned about having enough product for the holidays and, contrary to the usual spring drop, bid the price up $1.41 from March to July to peak at $13.43 for the year.

By then the world price for milk powder, which is about half of our support price, had returned to normal; national milk production had increased in response to better feed supplies and higher milk prices and, finally, the CCC stocks have increased enough to put the government giveaway program back in business to reduce commercial disappearance.

And The Cycle Ends

Put them all together and they spell BTSP or Back To The Support Price. That meant a drop of $3.24, the deepest cut of all, from $13.43, the July M-W, to $10.19 in December. Only 29 cents above the new support price of $9.90 for 3.5 percent milk.

It was nice while it lasted and I hope all dairymen used the opportunity in their best financial interests but it was no more than a blip on the milk price record caused by circumstances that were unplanned and certainly unexpected. So, let's not keep looking back to 1989 but start looking forward to bring some unity to the industry through existing organizations to make improvements that are a more dependable basis for future growth.

It's the right time to apply lime

Lime application during the winter allows the limestone time to react and gives you the advantage of rich, pH-balanced soil for your spring planting. Winter ground conditions also reduce soil compaction and rutting during spreading.

Numbers Game

Everyone uses numbers to make a point and it's true that the M-W price for December was the lowest in 12 years and yes it was $4.74 less than last December but that doesn't tell the whole story. It's also true that $10.19, the M-W in December, was only 89 cents less than March 1989 and only 14 cents less than April 1988 which doesn't sound nearly as bad as $4.74 less than December 1989. You can take any two months and compare them to tell any story you want because milk prices, like most farm product prices vary from month to month and season to season.

To get a more accurate picture you need a longer time period to even out these differences so yearly averages or, for some commodities like fresh produce, even a five year average should be used. Looking at yearly averages for the M-W price it was $12.21 in 1990 and $12.37 in 1989 so it dropped only 16 cents last year. However, 1989 at $12.37 it was $1.34 higher than 1988 which was only 20 cents less than 1987. So you see that 1989 was the blip that was out of character for milk prices and on balance the price now is more like it was in the spring of 1988 at $10.33 for the M-W price.

All of this to point out that it hasn't been that long ago that milk prices were at theses levels and are just returning to the more recent past than 12 years ago. If you could make it then you can make it now. The worst has already arrived and the only way to go is up. The higher prices of the last two years helped to fuel the increasing milk production which is coming mainly from more milk per cow rather than more cows. Probably the lower milk prices will discourage grain feeding sufficiently to lower milk production this summer and fall so the M-W price will go up to $11.00 where it had been from 1985 to 1988. I'm sure you would like to have more but at least you can take some comfort in knowing that you've been here before and made it. In addition, you'll have some over order handler and coop premiums you weren't getting in 1985.

January Prices

When we look at January prices you can see signs that the free fall has ended, the chute is open and, after you recover, you'll be ready to try it again. The M-W price in January dropped only three cents from December to $10.16 with butter, powder and cheese prices leveling off around the support prices. This may be as bad as it gets unless the spring flush of milk is so high that it has to be moved out of the northeast for processing. There is some concern about this since some plants have closed because we haven't had a spring flush the last two years.

Smaller drops recently in the M-W price are reflected in the uniform or blend price in Order 2 at $11.11 for January. That's only 12 cents less than December and a little more than was expected. You'll still see some lower prices from now to May as seasonally expected because of a lower proportion of fluid milk but no big surprises unless the spring flush becomes a flood.

Landscape Irrigation Certification

ARLINGTON, Va. — The Irrigation Association's (IA) Certification board of governors recently established a new educational program which is designed to certify landscape irrigation auditors.

Under this new program, certification is a two-step process. Step one is a training course which all candidates must attend and successfully complete. Step two requires that the candidate take the irrigation industry examination, which all candidates must pass.

The examination is administered by the National Assessment Institute, a nationally recognized testing organization which assists the IA in administering the organization's certification programs. All candidates must also sign the IA Code of Ethics when registering for the program.

Landscape irrigation auditors are involved in the gathering of irrigation water-use data and the testing of landscape irrigation systems. Landscape irrigation auditors compile water records, measure irrigate sites, identify plant materials by general groups, determine irrigation water requirements, estimate potential dollar and water savings, and rank sites by net benefits. They also observe system operations, locate irrigation zones, prepare site audit maps, and visually identify broken or misaligned equipment.

All certified landscape irrigation auditors will be listed in the annual "IA Certified Irrigation Specialist Directory." Used by those both in and outside the industry, this directory assists people in search of competent, committed, and qualified professionals in the irrigation industry. By being listed in this directory, irrigation specialists show their commitment to the irrigation industry and have demonstrated a desirel to advance their knowledge for the betterment of their clients.

Further information about the CLIA Program may be obtained by contacting Gretchen Sears, (703) 524-1200.

Ciba-Geigy Acquires Rights To Funginex

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Ciba-Geigy has acquired exclusive rights to manufacture Funginex® fungicide in agricultural markets.

Formerly manufactured by the FMC Corp., the disease-control product for stone fruit adds another dimension to Ciba-Geigy's existing fungicide product line.

A locally systemic fungicide, Funginex has excellent curative properties. Its primary use is for brown rot (blossom blight and fruit rot) in stone fruits. It also is effective on powdery mildew, scab and rust on apples, and mummyberry disease on high bush bluberries.

Ciba-Geiby's Funginex is available as a liquid formulation. The major markets for the chemical include the Great Lakes region, Mid-Atlantic states, and the Southeast. Label is pending for California growers.

Ciba-Geigy Product Manager John Freed sees the acquisition as a way to improve marketing service for chemical dealers. "We're pleased that we can offer another fungicide option in our product line," said Freed. "Funginex fits well with our current diesease-control products."

Ford's Compact Tractor Useful For Orchards

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Ford New Holland's new Model 4830 low-profile Ford tractor is a compact, high horsepower-to-weight unit designed for orchards and other limited-clearance work.

The 62-h.p. 4830 is powered by a 4-cylinder, 256 cubic inch diesel with large displacement-to-power ratio to provide full torque at lower RPMS. It offers more power for productivity in the compact size of Ford's 30 Series tractors, according to Ford New Holland product manager, John Hundley. The new tractor provides the torque for heavy loads and tough pulling conditions.

For working in orchards and nurseries, the Model 4830 has a low-profile steering wheel, horizontal exhaust, low-crown fenders, and grill-mounted head lights.

The constant-mesh, 8 x 2 transmission has six ratios under seven MPH. A creeper gear is optional. The 4830 hydraulics are powered by an 8.5-GPM gear pump. An optional auxiliary pump boosts hydraulic capacity to 14.1 GPM. The tractor is available with two open-system remotes or four closed-system hydraulic remotes.

The optional front wheel drive assist features constant-velocity U-joints and a 6-degree caster angle. Wheels can be turned to 52 degrees for shorter turning circles with reduced steering component stress.

The new 62-h.p. Model 4830 4-cylinder low-profile tractor from Ford New Holland offers orchard and nursery operators more power for productivity in a compact size. The 256 cubic inch diesel has large displacement-to-power ratio to provide higher torque at lower RPM.

Badger Improves Liquid Manure Vacuum Tank

KAUKAUNA, Wis. — An improved line of liquid manure vacuum tanks has been released by Badger Northland.

In addition to being built with Cor-Ten steel, a substance 20 percent stronger, 10 percent lighter, and eight times more corrosion resistant than plain ¼ " mild steel, the new Badger tanks also offer labor-saving features.

New features include standard 6" brass valves for increased corrosion resistance and easier operation. New auxiliary moisture traps have been added as standard equipment on the 1,000 rpm pump models and are optional on 540 rpm units. The new traps are designed to protect the pumps from foam, liquids, and other foreign material. New side fill ports also make use of optional 4" or 6" brass valves.

Primary shutoff valves have also been improved for positive pump protection from liquids and other materials. A new liquid level indicator shows manure levels in tanks at all times.

Badger's vacuum tanks come in three sizes — 1,500- 2,300- and 3,260-gallon capacities with a full complement of accessories available including injection systems to ensure that liquid manure handling is done as efficiently as possible.

Livestock Notes

Ammonia is produced from the bacterial action on urine and feces. Its levels are highest in swine barns with deep manure pits or bedding packs. Ammonia concentrations are usually less than 10 to 15 ppm when manure is removed at least once per week, and ventilation is adequate.

Hydrogen sulfide is produced from the bacterial action on feces in manure pits. It is especially a problem when manure is agitated or flushed from one pit to another. It can even be a problem when undisturbed manure levels reach the slats.

Carbon monoxide is produced by unvented gas heaters. Most heaters and brooders in swine facilities have no flue. This presents no problem as long as the heating and the ventilation systems are functioning normally. However, when gas orifices in the heating device become clogged or dirty, the resulting poor combustion produces significant amounts of carbon monoxide. If the faulty combustion is coupled with a low ventilation rate, concentrations of carbon monoxide may become dangerously toxic.

A New Development In Swine Farrowing Building Design

A new system called the SS System after its developer is showing excellent results — pigs exit the nursery weighing 78 pounds at nine weeks.

A 5x7 crate is used as part of a 7x7 pen system. The 7x7 pen has a 2-foot wide creep on one side, a crate in the middle and a 3x7 pen on the other side. The 3x7 pen becomes a 5x7 pen when the side of the crate is opened up.

The sows are initially brought into the 5x7 pens until ready to farrow. When the sow's water breaks, she is moved into a crate for three days, then back in the 5x7 pen again until weaning.

The developer weans gilts at 18 days and sows at 21 days. The pigs stay in the 7x7 pen for nine more days before being moved to the nursery. Two litters are run together at three days of age or earlier. Two litters then go to the nursery. In this case, the developer was averaging 11 pigs per litter weaned, so 22 pigs went into a nursery pen.

This arrangement minimizes the sow's time in crates and sow and pig stress. Sows have less problems with breeding back again, teats being pulled off, being constipated, losing weight with large litters, and almost all udder sections are used because of the extra pigs nursing. The sows tend to eat more feed (about 4 pounds/day) which helps them milk heavier.

The creeps are hovered so the room temperature can be lowered to increase sow appetite and keep pigs in the creep. In cool weather, curtains can be hung around the hover to trap more heat.

The flooring material should be metal and not plastic so pigs are attracted to the creep. Almost any crate can be modified to open one side. The crates are run parallel to the alley so the manager can look at the two most important things — the feed trough and the sow's rear end to check for discharges.

With the animal rights views we have around, this SS system negates many of their concerns. It also appears to perform better than just the crate. The building is about 40 percent larger because of the 7-foot width versus the 5-foot width. Note feeders do stick out up to 6 inches beyond a crate but "future" crates should keep the feeder inside since sows are only in there three days.

Pioneer Releases Enhanced Farm Accounting Software

DES MOINES, Iowa — Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc. has released Version 2.0 of the Pioneer® DollarWise farm accounting program.

According to Pioneer Ag Software Services Manager Willona Graham Goers, the single-entry accounting program has been designed to help farmers become familiar with computerized recordkeeping while providing detailed reports of their current financial situation.

Said Goers, "With Version 2.0 of the DollarWise farm accounting program, producers can quickly and easily track such important information as production costs per head or acre, general and enterprise income, cash flow, net worth, Schedule F, C and A tax requirements, and listings of vendors, transactions, and accounts."

Enhancements made to the software include the ability to print transaction listings by Schedule F tax lines, to copy recurring transactions from month to month, and to print notes about individual transactions with their transaction listings.

According to Goers, the program also features the ability to generate financial reports that can be imported into spreadsheet programs — such as Lotus® 1-2-3® — for creating budgets or analyzing "what if" situations. A new pop-up calculator has also been added which not only assists with arithmetic functions, but provides the ability to "paste" results directly into data entry fields.

"Farmers don't have to be experts in accounting to operate this program," said Goers. "The software walks users through each step they need to take with context-sensitive help screens, pull-down menus, and pop-up lists of accounts."

Cow-Calf Symposium At Pa. Beef Expo

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)— The second annual Pennsylvania Beef Expo will be held March 28-30 in Penn State's Agricultural Arena. On the schedule are several new features, including a cow-calf symposium and junior steer and heifer shows.

The cow-calf symposium will be held at the Meats Lab on campus from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Thursday, March 28. Speakers at the symposium will represent producers, agricultural groups and businesses, as well as Penn State's College of Agriculture.

"The symposium covers vital management aspects of cow-calf enterprises," said Dr. John Comerford, Penn State professor of dairy and animal science, who organized the symposium. "Managing cow-calf production is different than managing feedlot or backgrounding operations."

Robert Short, a nationally recognized researcher at the Fort Keogh Livestock and Range Experiment Station at Miles City, MT, will discuss the causes and prevention of calving difficulties and their effects on postpartum interval in beef cattle.

David Ivan, executive director of the Pennsylvania Beef Council, will evaluate the success of the state's beef checkoff program. Burleigh Anderson, a veterinarian from Loysville, who owns and manages Meadow Mist Angus Farm, will discuss the vaccinations beef cows should receive.

A special morning session on the most appealing kinds of beef will feature a panel of consumers and will be moderated by Dr. William Henning, assistant professor of animal science at Penn State. Other topics of the symposium range from making the most of pasture for beef cows to selecting appropriate protein and mineral supplements.

In addition to Thursday's symposium, the 1991 Beef Expo will feature junior steer and heifer shows on Friday and Saturday. "This is a new event at the Expo, and we expect it to become a regular feature," said Dr. Lowell Wilson, Penn State professor of animal science. "It gives young beef producers an opportunity to display the results of their hard work and dedication."

The junior steer show will take place Friday, March 29, during the afternoon, and the junior heifer show will take place early Saturday morning. Entries for the junior shows must be made through the Pennsylvania Beef Expo office, 651 Fox Hollow Road, State College, PA 16803, (814) 865-5857.

Other attractions at the 1991 Beef Expo will include purebred cattle shows, sales and exhibits; a herd bull showcase; a performance-tested bull sale; a trade show featuring 60 commercial and 10 non-profit exhibits; youth activities; and the 18th annual cattlemen's awards banquet. Banquet attendees should preregister with the Beef Expo office.

1991 BARN PAINTING
Aim For The Best - In Coating Film Thickness
To do it right use the finest kind of bristle brush evening out the coating into a film thickness that does not peel in normal moisture stress (found on most barn siding from outside and inside by livestock or stored animal feed)

1. PREPARATION. Peeling old coatings (improperly brushed) needs to be removed. The best again is simply water blasting or power washing! High volume of water - medium pressure is best! Done professionally or do it yourself, especially on the easy to reach areas.
2. MAKING A NEW START spray on brush in painting on the renewed surface or resurfaced wood siding The above mentioned AIM of coating thickness can prevent future peeling and resurfacing cost & effort. Simple, old fashioned brushing does most of the trick. This film will let moisture breathe through it. Depending on the amount of weather wear it can be recoated lightly in 10 years of more. Southern exposures usually wear faster.

How To Reduce Soil Compaction

ROBERT E. LEIBY and
DAVID L. DUNBAR
Extension Office

Performing field operations on wet soils, using multiple field operations to grow the same crop continuously, and eliminating meadow crops from crop rotations contribute to extensive and deep soil compaction that can't be corrected without assistance from the farmer. The following guidelines are offered by Don Daum and J. David Keener, Penn State agiriculatural engineers.

• Stay Off Wet Soils • Compactibility of any soil is greatest when the usable soil depth is near field capacity. You can check the water content by first digging up a portion of soil from a three- to six-inch depth. Then, mold the soil into a ball with your hands, and then drop it from a height of about four feet onto a hard surface. If the ball doesn't break or crack on impact, the soil is too wet for field operations.

Sometimes, field operations must be performed because of timeliness even though the soil is near field capacity. In these situations, minimize axle load and increase tire size to help reduce deep compaction.

• Reduce Tillage • Tillage systems with a reduced number of operations leave a greater amount of residue on the soil surface. This surface residue helps prevent surface sealing (a form of compaction) by intercepting raindrops before they hit the soil surface.

• Add Organic Matter • Organic matter is added to the soil in the form of crop residues, animal manure, sludge, and/or plants plowed under the soil. Organic matter promotes the development of good soil structure and decreases soil bulk density by binding soil particles together as aggregates, so they are not as easily cracked, split, or compressed by tillage or wheel traffic. Adding organic matter to the soil also increases soil nutrient availability for crop growth.

• Rotate Crops • Fields in crop rotations that include alfalfa, clover, or grass usually have soils that are less compact than soil in fields without these rotations. This is true for most soils because once these crops are seeded there is generally no tillage operation after seeding. Trips across the field tend to occur with hay harvesting, so the soil is dry and less likely to be compacted. The deep rooting depths and large taproots of alfalfa and clover also keep the soil more porous and remove large amounts of water, which help dry the soil and increase cracking of the soil.

• Alter Tillage Depth • If you till the soil, till deeply in dry years. Vary the tillage depth in subsequent years to minimize the development of a "tillage pan" or compacted zone. As tillage systems are switched from the moldboard plow to the disk or field cultivator, a "disk panY can be created. This pan may be less dense than a plow pan, but it is closer to the soil surface.

• Control Machinery Traffic • Compaction will be localized if all equipment tires are restricted to particular "tracks", leaving the rest of the field essentially uncompacted. Only soil in the untrafficked row and row middles will receive compaction caused by tillage and planting equipment. Tillage systems with implements of different widths make it difficult to control traffic. Controlled traffic can be practiced most easily in ridge plant and no till systems.

• Deep-Till for Correction • Yield reductions attributed to compaction also may be associated with disease, fertility, or other problems. To guarantee that observed yield reductions are associated with compaction, soil investigations are necessary to ensure that a deep tillage operation will be successful. Subsoiling or other tillage to alleviate compaction should be needed only when crop roots have been inspected visually and shown to be restricted by a compacted zone.

The depth of yield-limiting soil compaction will determine the required tillage depth and tillage tool. If compaction occurs in the top six to eight inches of the soil, tillage tools such as a chisel plow or moldboard plow can be used to shatter the compacted layer. If the compaction layer is lower than eight to ten inches, a subsoiler, ripper, or paraplow may have to be used.

Most subsoilers are chisel-like tools having curved or straight shanks. Each shank will require at least 20 to 30 power take-off horsepower for deep tillage. It is suggested that the subsoiling layer be about 50 percent deeper than the compacted layer and that the shank spacing be equal to the tillagle depth for greatest shattering.

This tillage should be performed in the late summer or fall when the entire soil profile is fairly dry and can be shattered easily. This subsoiling operation, when performed properly below the depth of compaction, will displace and shatter a V-shaped section. To ensure that the compacted zone has been properly shattered, dig a hole and look for the V-shaped wedge of soil that should have been loosened.

Secondary tillage may be used in the spring to level the field prior to seeding. Slot planting without tillage has also been used successfully. Subsoiled field can easily redevelop a compacted layer if the loosened soil is worked when it is too wet or if wheel traffic is not controlled.

Farm Program Sign-up Begins

Grain producers will be able to sign-up for the 1991 Wheat and Feed Grain acreage reduction programs until April 26 at the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) offices across Pennsylvania.

To qualify for price support loans and deficiency payments, producers must reduce their acreage bases by at least 15 percent for wheat, 7.5 percent for corn, barley and sorghum and zero percent for oats.

At sign-up, farmers may request advance deficiency payments on their wheat and feed grains. These payments will equal 40 percent of the estimated deficiency payment rate for the crops. Advance deficiency payments will be issued in cash. Estimated deficiency payment rates are $1.47 per bushel for wheat, 58¢ for corn, 56¢ for sorghum, 47¢ for barley, and 15¢ for oats.

There is no cross compliance. This means that farmers may elect to reduce acreage in one program crop and pass-up supports in another crop by planting the full crop base, or exceeding the base, on the same farm.

The 1991 programs offers planting flexibility on up to 25 percent of the crop acreage base. Generally, this "flex" acreage may be planted to any crop except fruits and vegetables.

The programs do not contain paid land diversion provisions. However, wheat and feed grain farmers may devote all or a portion of their maximum payment acres to conservation uses, and get guaranteed deficiency payments on 92 percent of these acres, minus the actual acres planted to wheat or feed grains.

For additional 1991 farm program details, contact your local ASCS office. County extension offices also have tools (computer programs and worksheets) to help producers decide what their level of participation should be.

How Much Is A "PPB"

Present-day chemical analysis methods have the ability to detect quantities smaller than one part per billion (ppb). The following examples might help us visualize 1 ppb:

- A single kernel in 2,000 tons of corn.
- A shot glass in the Alaska oil spill.
- A penny out of $10 million.
- One second out of 31.7 years.
- One drop in 16,000 gallons.

The Livestock Market Outlook

The following discussion of the livestock market was prepared by H. Louis Moore, Penn State agricultural economist:

After two years of fairly good profits, hog producers seemed ready to expand last September. But they apparently changed their minds. Sow farrowings were up about one percent during the fall and pigs per litter were at a record 7.82. Therefore, the fall pig crop was up two percent.

If hog producers follow through with their intentions, they will have farrowed two percent more sows in the December-February quarter but will cut farrowings two percent in the March-May period. This is a very unusual move during a period of profitability in the hog business. Let's hope producers follow through on these intentions.

It appears that pork output in 1991 will be up two percent at most. Earlier estimates indicated that pork output would be up alittle more than three percent. In addition, feed prices should remain on the defensive in 1991, keeping production costs down for all livestock producers.

Wheat Growers Should Keep Eye Out For Sulfur Shortages

WASHINGTON, D.C. — It stands to reason that the more wheat you harvest, the more nutrients you remove from the soil. So after last year's bumper crop of 2.74 billion bushels — the third highest in U.S. history and the biggest crop since 1982 — it comes as no surprise that university soil specialists are now urging growers to pay more attention to soil fertility needs before topdressing their 1990/1991 winter crop.

By itself, the bumper wheat crop is incentive to sound the alarm. But specialists are particularly concerned this time around because the 1990 crop was 35 percent higher than the previous year's. Perhaps even more significant to fertility management is the rise in per-acre yields to 39.6 bushels per acre — a new record and more than a 7-bushel jump from 1989.

Wheat growers are usually quick to replenish soils with the basic nutrients, such as nitrogen (N), phosphorus (P), and potassium (K). But last year's sharp increase in per-acre yields indicates more intensive land use and more nutrients depleted from the soil. Soil specialists are particularly concerned about soil reserves of sulphur (S) because — without adequate levels of this nutrient — a wheat crop cannot be expected to meet its full yield potential, nor can it make efficient use of applied nitrogen. Research also indicates that sulphur deficiency can reduce a wheat crop's protein content, while diminishing its baking and milling qualities.

"With this past year's bumper crop, we are emphasizing that farmers should put back adequate nutrients in their soil, including sulphur," said Dr. Ray Lamond, extension soil specialists at Kansas State University. "For high-yield wheat production, the addition of sulphur in a fertilization program can have a significant impact."

Sulphur's importance in wheat production is not new, but in recent years, many growers have failed to keep up with their crop's increasing sulphur requirement. This is partly due to the absence of sulphur in modern, high-analysis N-P-K fertilizers.

But the problems has been fueled by other factors, such as a sharp reduction in sulphur dioxide (SO_2) emissions from industry and utilities (the Environmental Protection Agency says SO_2 emissions were reduced 13 percent between 1980 and 1987 and 28 percent since 1970) more intensive land use, and a steady increase in average crop yields.

"We're definitely seeing more sulphur deficiencies than ever before," said Dr. Jay Goos, extension soil specialist at North Dakota State University. "If wheat fields are yellowish, farmers can no longer assume it's because of a nitrogen deficiency. There's a good chance that the missing nutrient is sulphur."

For optimum yield and protein content, wheat plants should contain one unit of sulphur for every 12-15 units of nitrogen, said Donald Messick, an agronomist at The Sulphur Institute, Washington, D.C. Applying nitrogen alone to a crop that is marginally sulphur deficient may actually widen the crops N:S ratio and induce a more serious sulphur deficiency, he said.

"A lot of time in wheat, we dont' see a sulphur deficiency until after we've put on the first spring nitrogen application," said Dr. Stan Chapman, extension soil specialists at the University of Arkansas. "Maintaining a proper balance of nitrogen and sulphur is crucial for optimum yield, protein, and crop quality."

How can wheat growers determine whether sulphur deficiencies are occurring? Agronomists agree that a soil test is a good place to start, although it is not always a good indicator.

"Because sulphur is a mobile nutrient, it isn't always easy to diagnose a deficiency," said Dr. Hunter Follett, extension soil specialist at Colorado State University. "While our soil test labs will run a test for sulphur deficiency upon request, we believe that growers should suspect a deficiency if their soil is sandy and low in organic matter or if there is a low amount of sulphur in the irrigation water." A plant tissue analysis is also important, Follett said.

Timing is an additional consideration in determining sulphur needs. "While high yields can be produced when sulphur is applied as a topdressing or at planting, sulphur deficiencies cannot be totally corrected by a late application of sulphur," said Dr. Charles Mitchell, extension agronomist at Auburn University. "A delay in applying sulphur in years when sulphur deficiencies may occur could result in significant yield and profit losses."

In cooperation with university soil specialists, The Sulphur Institute has produced an informative, noncommercial brochure on sulphur's role in wheat production. TSI also has brochures that address sulphur's need in specific regions of North America. For a free copy of any brochure, farmers should send their name and address to The Sulphur Institute, 1140 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20036.

Pa. Forest Industry

PITTSBURGH — Pennsylvania's forest products industry, recognizing dangers to the industry posed by the high cost of workers compensation insurance and other problems, has organized the Timber Harvesting Council of Pennsylvania to promote aggressive programs in standards, education, certification, and training.

The nonprofit council resulted from a meeting in December 1989 when 90 representatives from forest product companies, logging contractors associations, state and federal agencies, insurance companies, equipment manufacturers, and educators met at Penn State to look for solutions to those problems.

A Ben Franklin grant request has been approved for funding at a level of $30,000 to be matched by a $30,000 cash contribution from NORTIM Corporation, and $59,000 in-kind support from industry.

The Certification Program will use the latest advanced technology for training of timber harvesters and loggers through standard instruction and proficiency testing in the woods and through classroom modules.

Soil Compaction

Despite the recession we are experiencing in the national economy, 1991 will be a profitable year for hog producers. Some estimates place the yearly average price for hogs at about $50 per hundredweight. Summer prices can again reach $60, but only if there is no expansion in production.

Despite the long period of profitability, the number of hog farms is dropping rapidly. In 1990, there was a reduction of 28,000 farms with hogs nationally (nine percent) to a new total of 278,000. At the end of 1990, only four farms remained for every ten which were in business a decade earlier. Today about 29,000 of the nation's hog farms account for nearly two-thirds of all the hogs marketed. In Pennsylvania, a dozen contractors may control one-third of the sow herd.

The beef sector will see little expansion in this year. The 1991 calf crop will probably expand by nearly a half-million head. Cow-calf operators will hold more heifers back for expansion, thus reducing the slaughter of heifers. Cow-calf operators should do as well in 1991, as in the last two years. Feeder animals are costing more but this is partially offset by lower feed costs.

Total beef production will probably increase by about one percent, about the same as the population growth. The proportion of total slaughter coming from feedlots continues to increase. In 1991, about 79 percent of total slaughter will come from fed cattle. The yield per fed animals continues to increase while the slaughter of calves and cows continues to decline. Many feel that choices steer prices will average $75 to $81 per hundredweight in 1991, and in line with prices in 1990.

The price outlook for pork and beef would be much brighter if the expansion in broilers didn't continue at such a high rate.

Farmers Concerned About Groundwater Safety

PRESCOTT, Wis. — Increased awareness of groundwater quality and the potential impact of crop production practices on the purity of rural drinking water are being translated into action by a significant number of U.S. farmers.

In response to a recent survey conducted by Jacques Seed Company, 85 percent said they are strongly to mildly concerned about the possibility of farm chemicals and/or fertilizer seeping into their farm well water. As a measure of that concern, 35 percent of those who report their farm well as their source of drinking water have tested that water for safety within the last 12 months.

"Approximately 200 farmers responded to the survey which was included in the most recent issue of "Jacques Country" magazine, a company customer publication," said Carol Anderson, marketing communications manager for Jacques. "The survey was designed to measure the attitudes and opinions of our customers about their concern for groundwater safety and what actions they might take, if any, to preserve the quality of groundwater."

Readers were asked to voluntarily fill out the questionnaire and return it to the company. There were no incentives offered for return of a completed survey.

"The overall findings are consistent with other surveys I've seen," said Dr. Peter Nowak, University of Wisconsin rural sociologist. "Farmers are concerned about possible threats to groundwater quality caused by agricultural production practices. But they don't know if there really is a problem; and if there is a problem they don't know if they are contributing to the problem. But if someone can scientifically establish those linkages, certainly most farmers — 9 out of 10 in this survey — are more than willing to take steps to attempt to correct those problems."

Nowak said this is indicated by the 61 percent who said they believe farming practices represent only a moderate threat to groundwater quality in their area. But 89 percent said if farming methods were shown to be a threat, they would be willing to change those practices to protect the water quality even if it involved extra cost or labor.

Many of those responding said they are already changing their farm production methods because of concern about groundwater safety. More than 60 percent reported reduced or discontinued us of chemical pesticides; 34 percent have reduced or discontinued the use of purchased fertilizers; and 52 percent have increased mechanical cultivation of row crops in order to reduce the use of herbicides.

One reason for the survey, said Anderson, is to gauge the level of customer interest in specific farm management practices. "It's important for us to know their attitudes and opinions on issues that affect the way they farm. This survey, plus another conducted in the summer of 1990, clearly indicate our customers want to know more about farming methods which will maintain their profitability but will also have no adverse impact on the environment. Jacques research efforts will continue to concentrate on those areas."

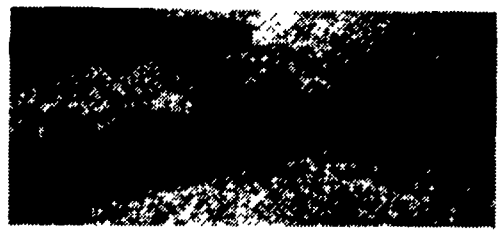
Increase Pasture Yields and lots more!



Low-Cost FUERST F-L-E-X-I-B-L-E TINE HARROW

Original "Spreading Action"® tines give better coverage at much higher speeds. Adjusts without tools to provide the right penetration for a big variety of jobs!

PASTURES: Increases quality and quantity of feed from pastures. Aerates to stimulate growth and improve moisture penetration. Scatters droppings, reducing parasites. Prepares soil for overseeding without disturbing existing growth. Works in seed and fertilizer. Many owners report pasture yield increases of 15%.

HERBICIDE INCORPORATION: Independent research using black light photography proves the Fuerst Harrow behind your disk or cultivator gives you "near perfect" incorporation in one pass--better than implements costing several times more! Shreds trash as it prepares & levels seedbeds.

BROADCASTING SMALL GRAINS AND GRASSES: University of Illinois found overseeding by broadcasting followed by a Fuerst Harrow a superior combination, out-performing equipment costing more than 10 times as much. Pulled behind the broadcaster, it covers seed to desired depth in one time-saving operation.

SHREDS STALKS: Shreds and spreads stalks in spring ahead of no-till and ridge-till planting.

4 to 42 ft. widths. Flexes to cover every inch at 6-8 mph. No maintenance. Easy to use and store. Insist on the original "Spreading Action"® tines.

Prospects Good For Delaware Ag

NEWARK, Del. — Delaware farm income could reach a near-record high this year, provided the Gulf War is short, predicts a University of Delaware Cooperative Extension economist.

"I would expect 1991 gross farm income in Delaware to be close to $750 million, with net farm income at least $200 million," Gerald F. Vaughn, extension resource economics and policy specialist, told members of the Delaware business community gathered for a recent conference on the state's 1991 economic outlook. The conference was sponsored by the university's bureau of economic and business research.

Energy costs are the major uncertainty in this forecast, he warned. "Speculative oil prices, like those of other flexibly priced commodities, may overshoot the market in the short run and can gyrate wildly. This could cut into broiler industry profits, the mainstay of Delaware agriculture. If crude oil averages $27 a barrel versus $18, that adds about five cents per pound to broiler production costs," the specialist said. This is the result mainly of higher costs to grow and ship grain for feed.

Such increases could mean higher poultry prices for consumers. But Vaughn predicted that to the extent lower interest rates and/or an increase in money supply boosts disposable income, domestic demand would likely rise, keeping farm commodity prices at satisfactory levels. At the same time, lower interest rates would help keep the lid on farm production costs.

Lower interest rates would also tend to translate into lower dollar values, a factor that could make U.S. agricultural exports more competitive in world markets, the economist said.

The biggest cloud on the horizon is the possibility of a protracted war, which could weaken agriculture.

If the war in the Middle East lasts many months, Vaughn speculated, the cost of fighting would lead to additional Federal borrowing, an inflationary move that would put upward pressure on interest rates. Oil prices would remain high, especially if Persian Gulf oil fields are seriously damaged.

Delaware farmers pay about $30 million a year for interest and $10 million for fuel, Vaughn said. So sharply rising interest rates and high energy costs over a prolonged period would weaken the state's agricultural economy.

"War in the Middle East is not likely to increase Delaware farm income, based on the experience during the Vietnam conflict," the resource economist said. "Broiler prices and profits were low during some years of U.S. involvement in Vietnam."

However, gains could occur under any of the following scenarios, Vaughn said:

• The Delaware broiler industry could gain a larger share of the Northeast market since rising transportation costs due to higher oil prices would tend to put southern broiler-producing states that compete in the Northeast market at greater disadvantage.

• If exchange rates aren't unfavorable, recycled petro-dollars could boost world demand for U.S. agricultural exports.

• If oil prices stay very high for a year or more, and/or oil supplies become a problem, some types of agricultural production and processing might be able to shift to less expensive forms of energy. For example, a feed-manufacturing facility could be equipped to use either oil or natural gas, depending on which costs less.

New Soybeans Outyield Bin Seed

DEKALB, Ill. — "Every farmer has a reason why his bin seed is good, but extensive university tests prove that cleaned, bagged seed outperforms bin seed," said DEKALB Plant Manager Ted Woosley.

Unlike most bin seed, commercial seed is tested thoroughly for germination, and is cleaned and stored to maintain its purity and quality. Commercial seed also produces more uniform stands, a key factor in higher yields. "With bin seed, your stand is not as uniform," Woosley said.

Although farmers' bin seed may germinate, they usually must plant more of it to achieve a desired plant population than they would with commercial seed. "The cost per acre for new seed is not greater, and you know it will perform better," Woosley said.

Research shows approximately one-half bushel of added yield per acre is needed to pay for new, clean, and thoroughly processed soybean seed, said Dick Bohling, manager of agronomic serevices for DEKALB. He said that results from Field Analysis Comparison Trial (FACT) plots and university trials show a two- to three-bushel-per-acre advantage over bin seed.

However, a two- to three-bushel-per-acre difference may be hard to see from the combine, so it's important for farmers to accurately measure yield results.

"Seed in the bin can look good," Bohling said, "but you don't know what has happened to it while it sat there all winter."

Planting commercial seed also saves farmers the hassle of trucking bin beans to a commercial cleaner, as well as the costs of hauling, cleaning, and bagging them.

AMINOTEK™. FOR RECORD BREAKING PERFORMANCE.

NEW FROM MASTER MIX®. COMING TO A DEALER NEAR YOU.

AminoTek™ feeds are a blend of high-quality proteins which have complementary amino acid profiles. The AminoTek patented process is then applied to this blend, resulting in significantly increased levels of absorbable bypass protein and amino acids.

Central Soya research shows that cows fed AminoTek had a summit peak which was over 8 pounds higher than the peak of cows fed conventional protein feeds. Besides the obvious economic advantage which comes from increased milk production, other economic advantages may include improved milk composition and breeding performance.

See your Master Mix dealer for the AminoTek feed that's right for your herd.

Firestone Expands Ag Tire Line

ARKON, Ohio — Firestone Tire is introducing a number of new sizes in some of its more popular agricultural tires, including the world's first radial R-2 tractor tire in size 12.4R46. In all, seven new sizes are being rolled out to meet the specific needs of Firestone's farm tire customers.

"For more than 50 years, Firestone has been a leader in the farm tire field, and these line enhancements indicate our continuing commitment to provide top quality, high-tech agricultural tires to meet the needs of today's farmer," said Don Juceam, agricultural tire marketing manager for Firestone Tire. "Fifty-four years ago Firestone developed the first practical pneumatic farm tire. That same kind of innovation and foresight is going into the state-of-the-art agricultural tires we are producing today and developing for tomorrow."

The additions include:

• Firestone's radial Champion Spade Grip line has been enhanced with the addition of size 12.4R46 (*). The tube-type radial Champion Spade Grip in size 12.4R46 is designed for wet field use, and its long, narrow footprint and high clearance allows it to move easily along narrow rows with minimal root zone compaction and root damage. As with every radial Champion Spade Grip, the tire features four strong stabilizer belts under the tread to help minimize bar movement. The radial construction and body plies allow the tire to ride softer with less rolling resistance for improved fuel economy.

• The Champion Spade Grip line has a new R-2 size — 18.4-30. The tube-type, six-ply version of the popular wet field tire is designed for both original equipment and replacement market fitments.

The line's proven long bar/long bar R-2 design provides a full shoulder-to-shoulder contact patch for positive traction and long wear. The tapered tread bars are designed to be self-cleaning and compounded for long wear, tear, and weather resistance. In addition, they help maintain stability on hard ground and roadways, even on today's high horsepower tractors. A special sidewall rubber compound helps protect the tire from weather checking, and a bead/rim protector shield helps prevent stubble and soil from entering the area between the bead and the rim flange.

• The Firestone Champion Guide Grip line has been upgraded with the addition of a tube-type, eight-ply 14L-16.1 size. That size of the popular four-rib F-2 tire was formerly available only in six- and 10-ply versions. Designed as a front tire for large agricultural vehicles, the Champion Guide Grip four-rib provides high flotation, a long tread life, and resistance to side-slip. The tire is also available in a wide-range of low profile/high flotation and conventional sizes for original equipment and replacement fitments.

• Two new sizes have been added to Firestone's ANS Tractor R-3 line. Size 35.5L-32 20-ply is a shallow skid depth, turf-type tire. This bias tube-type size is designed primarily for use on hillside combines. The 10-ply version of the ANS Tractor in size 28L-26 has been discontinued, replaced by a new 12-ply version. The tubeless bias size is designed for use on combines, forage harvesters, and hay balers.

• Firestone's Radial All-Traction FWD, the first radial tire designed specifically for the front axle of mechanical front-wheel drive tractors, has a new size. The R-1 tubeless tire is now available in size 14.9R34 (*). As with all radial all-traction FWD sizes, the tire features Firestone's special multi-angle tread bar design that provides pulling power, traction, good lateral stability, minimal tread squirm, and long tread wear. The tread pattern's long bar/long bar design has an open center that helps keep the tread bars clean for better traction. The tire also features four stabilizer belts under the tread to minimize squirm and maximize traction and durability, and a special bead/rim protector shield to prevent stubble and soil from entering the area between the bead and the rim flange.

• To compliment its existing eight- and 12-ply options, the Firestone farm/implement line has been enhanced with the addition of a 10-ply version of size 11L-15. The tubeless, bias I-1 tire is designed for use on free-rolling wheels on farm implements, wagons and trailers. The farm/implement's five-rib tread design helps resist side-slip and provides directional stability on banks and hillsides. A special tread compound gives long tread life, while the tire's nylon cord body is both durable and strong enough to carry heavy loads on soft ground.

All of these line enhancements, said Juceam, are currently available through Firestone agricultural tire dealers and distributors.

Dairy Board Consolidates Cheese Promotion, Approves Television Commercials

ARLINGTON, Va. — Advertising for the National Dairy Board's cheese account will be consolidated from DDB Needham in Chicago to Grey Advertising in New York.

During fiscal year 1989-1990, the National Dairy Board expended $20 million, or 34 percent of its total $59 million advertising and sales promotion budget on cheese promotion efforts.

This agency change was based on an extensive review of the agencies that conduct NDB advertising and promotional campaigns targeted to consumers. This review evaluated the agencies in a number of areas including: agencies' application of their management resources, "creative performance" of each agency, production efficiency of each agency, and other related issues.

Based on this review process, the Board concluded that moving NDB's cheese account would provide an opportunity to increase efficiency and economies of scale in the NDB's advertising and promotion efforts.

As a result of this merger of advertising agency assignments, NDB will realize a greater cost savings (approximately $650,000) for America's dairy farmers in our generic cheese, ice cream and butter promotion efforts targeted to consumers.

McCann-Erickson (based in San Francisco), will continue to handle NDB's $21 million milk and dairy calcium account.

Two New Commercials Approved

"Fast Forward Jack" and "Fast Forward Jill" — two new fluid milk commercials were approved by the Board.

The two new commercials aimed at "Tweens" (ages 12-17), continue to communicate the growth benefits associated with drinking milk.

Qualitative research conducted prior to the final versions of the commercials showed that in addition to growth, the key benefits for boys are physical strength and social attractiveness.

For girls, a more attractive physical appearance and social attractiveness are key attributes.

Both of these strategies will continue to be used for future concept development. The commercials are set to air on network stations as well as cable and syndicated stations beginning in early February.

New Butter Print Ad Approved

Market research, the driving force behind all of NDB's advertising and promotion efforts, has shown that the food processing channel accounts for about one-third of all butter and cheese usage.

Thus NDB is launching a preliminary effort to provide support to this important distribution channel in the form of a new butter print advertisement. The Board has approved a new print ad for placement in widely distributed food processing/manufacturing magazines such as "Bakery, Bakery Production and Marketing and Milling."

The Ford Consortium, a Chicago-based agricultural issues management firm was assigned the task of conducting an antibiotic residue situation analysis for the National Dairy Board.

The analysis will examine: drugs utilized in dairy cattle, the magnitude of the residue problem, methodologies for residue analysis and plans for expanded programs, tests and extent of use of on-farm tests, penalty programs and enforcement actions, residue-related milk premium incentive programs, and quality assurance programs and recommendations.

The board had decided to undertake the situation analysis on behalf of the industry after board research indicated that a proposed $1.7 million producer education program was not the answer to the problem.

"We hope the analysis will reveal several means of dealing with the problem," said Richard Weiss, NDB senior vice president for public relations.

The Ford Consortium was one of three organizations that pre-

New M-F 100-140 hp tractors

Advanced QUADRAM Power makes a difference you can hear and feel.

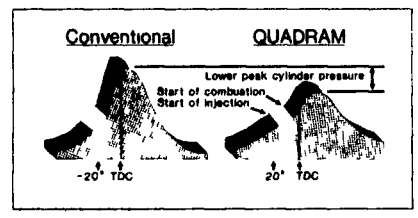
Massey-Ferguson is setting the standards for the 90s with three new 100 to 140 hp high-performance tractors that deliver improved engine torque characteristics and fuel efficiency with lower noise levels and lower engine stress.

Revolutionary new engines

The key to quick, smooth, efficient combustion is complete air and fuel mixing.

The Quadram cylinders produce an intense swirl of air for quick and thorough mixing of the fuel and air after injection. As a result, injection can be delayed closer to top-dead-center (TDC).

A unique 4-lobed (QUAD) bowl on the crown of the piston maximizes the amount of air swirl in the combustion chamber.



Lower peak cylinder pressures and stresses result when less combustion takes place prior to TDC.

Perkins 1000 Series engines have a very small amount of combustion taking place prior to TDC. As a result, the engines are more efficient and powerful, with much lower noise and vibration.

You'll notice the Quadram difference right away. The engine runs smoother and quieter — up to 50% quieter than competitive engines.

But the only way you can really appreciate the M-F Quadram advantage is to actually see and hear the tractors perform. So even if you aren't currently in the market for a tractor of this size, you owe it to yourself to see the latest in agricultural engine technology.

Dairy Board

sented proposals to NDB's Public Relations Committee at the January board meeting.

Cheese Situation Analysis

The board also heard an analysis of the cheese situation. The purposes for the analysis were: to assess trends in the marketplace regarding cheese, and to assess current consumer attitudes toward cheese.

All of the information compiled for this situation analysis was based on quarterly tracking data obtained by NDB.

After 10 months in 1990, compared to the same period in 1989, the commercial disappearance of total cheese has risen by 6.3 percent. The category of "other" cheeses (which includes Italian-type cheeses) has increased by 8.0 percent this year, while the category of American-type cheeses has risen by 4.3 percent.

Over the longer term, there has been a shift toward the "other" cheeses and away from American-type cheeses. For the most recent year available (1989), as a percentage of total commercial disappearance, 34 percent of cheese was consumed in-home, 34 percent was used in the foodservice market and 32 percent was used in the food processing and bakery segments.

In 1990, in-home consumption of cheese has risen by 2.6 percent over the same period in 1989. This increase was largely driven by an increase in the amount of cheese purchased by each buying household from 19.1 pounds in 1989 to 19.4 pounds in 1990.

This in-home consumption increase was led by growth in the consumption of cream, mozzarella, and American cheeses.

Additionally, in-home consumption of lowfat cheese has increased markedly in 1990, rising by 24.2 percent in the first 11 periods.

Strategic Marketing Alliance

The Strategic Marketing Alliance's (SMA) centralized Market Research Database was launched at a meeting in Atlanta on Jan. 7 and 8, and new findings compiled from extensive research conducted by the 15-cent groups was unveiled.

Additionally, a consensus was reached on key equities and opportunities that were identified for the dairy industry to enhance overall, as well as individual dairy promotion marketing strategies.

The SMA Market Research Database should be fully operational by April 1, 1991.

NDB Contract Awarded

JP Communications was selected by the board to conduct frozen dairy dessert research in Indonesia, Brunei, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore, Hong Kong, Thailand and Taiwan. Additionally, JP Communications will explore Pacific Rim opportunities for specialty cheeses.

Approval was granted by the Board to continue with the NDB Undergraduate Scholarship Program. Each fall, NDB awards up to twenty $1,000 scholarships to undergraduate students from across the country currently pursuing a major in dairy or food science.

Scholarships are awarded based upon outstanding academic achievement, involvement in dairy-oriented extracurricular activities and letters of recommendation from university faculty.

The board also approved a plan to continue the evaluation of National Dairy Promotion and Research Board Dairy Food Research Centers. The progress of the program at the Dairy Foods Research Center at the University of Wisconsin will be reviewed by a panel of experts not directly associated with the Center, and recommendations about future NDB support of the Center will be made to the Board.

Dairy Projects Completed

"Safety of Hispanic-style Cheeses with Respect to Selected Bacterial Pathogens" is a project completed at the University of California at Davis within the California Dairy Foods Research Center, which found that the growth of microorganisms could be diminished extensively by acidification of milk to a pH of ≥5.9 and cheese to a pH of≥6.1, adding Na-benzoate and K-sorbate (preservatives) to cheese at levels ≥0.3 percent and storage at temperatures ≤8°C.

These findings provide ways by which the dairy industry can decrease the risk of pathogens in soft cheeses and assure product safety in products that are abused.

A project supported by the Western Dairy Foods Research Center at Utah State University, designed to determine the effects of iron fortification on Cheddar and process cheese quality and to establish the bioavailability of iron on the "optimized" iron-protein complexes as well as cheese fortified with them has been completed.

Iron fortification did not affect the quality of Cheddar cheese or processed cheese although some differences exist between the two cheeses.

This project was launched on the assumption that it is unlikely that iron bound to milk protein is free to change its oxidation state at the pH of cheese; and thus alter its quality.

The results of the research indicate that it is possible to fortify cheese products with iron.

The researchers at the Western Dairy Foods Research Center indicate that iron fortified dairy products could be promoted as being beneficial for increasing the iron density of diets low in that mineral, as well as calcium and vitamin D; thereby addressing two major nutritional concerns of women and children: i.e., iron deficiency (women, children under age two and elderly men) and osteoporosis (middle-aged women, growing children and elderly men). Young children and teen-agers enjoy process cheese.

Predator Damage

HERBERT C. JORDAN
Associate Professor
Poultry Science
Penn State University

4-H and FFA members who keep poultry on pasture a few hours a day must reduce the number of live birds being killed by owls, hawks, or other predators. Each year more than 100 capons are reported lost to Great Horned Owls, which are now on the nest and will soon need to feed their young.

Owls attack frequently at daylight or after dusk. Allow young birds out only with a guard dog or human shepherd after 10 a.m. and put them in a building by 4 p.m.

The raven is also now on the nest and may steal freshly laid eggs in outside pens where wild turkeys or pheasant breeders are kept.

The gray and red fox kill several hundred head of range poultry or game birds every year. Raccoons, weasels, rats, mink, house cats, dogs, humans, and Coopers Hawks can kill or steal many birds each year, especially if birds are young.

Some preventive measures include an electric fence, a useful guard dog, a fence with a top on it.

REAL ESTATE - 85 ACRE FARM

Real Estate consists of 85 Acres, more or less, in Union Township, Snyder County, PA, whereon is situate a Bank Barn, Corn Crib, Implement Shed, & Other Minor Outbuildings, however, there is no house on property due to a fire a few years ago. The Snyder County Tax Assessment Office lists the farm as approximately 60 Acres tillable, approximately 10 Acres pasture, approximately 18 Acres woodland and approximately 1 Acre around farm buildings. This Farm has many pluses one of them being that there is approximately 1,100 ft. of road frontage on the south side of State Road 54050 and approximately 1,800 ft. on the west side and approximately 1,400 on the east side of Township Road #438. Farm also offers a nice layout of tillable grounds w/mostly Weikert & Hartleton type soils w/a stream flowing through property. One special feature which this farm has to offer is you can see almost all the grounds of the farm from the buildings and you can see the buildings from almost all grounds of the farm and you would most likely have many choices of location on farm to build a home. Property is designated on Union Township, Snyder County, Tax Assessment Map #06, Parcel 28 and is recorded in Snyder County Deed Book 84, Page 148.

SOME CONTROVERSIES NEVER END.

BUT THERE'S NO CONFUSION ABOUT NEW PURINA® HIGH OCTANE® BABY PIG CHOW®. YOU MIGHT BUY A LESSER PRESTARTER.® BUT YOUR BABY PIGS WON'T.

Pigs prefer it. So they eat more. And gain faster. The research even made us take a gulp. Pigs prefer New High Octaine Baby Pig Chow by an amazing 2 to 1 margin — with feed intake increased by 10% in the first week after weaning — and an over 24% increase in average daily gain. And that's not in comparison to some common, off-the-wall pre-starter. That's when baby pigs were tempted by our farmer best. What's more, there's just no downside to this new prestarter. Feed efficiency is better, too. 14% better to be exact.

Our recommendation? Switch immediately. Pigs are pigs. We didn't have to pay them to say this product is better. See your Purina representative — and share a cold soda while you get the details.

LET YOUR PIGS DECIDE.
